The General Public and the Torrance Housing Program

By E. STANDISH PALMER, Manager
Housing Department, Torrance Chamber of Commerce

The attitude of the general public has a very pronounced effect on the rate of growth of a community. And in return the continued growth and prosperity of Torrance is of vital concern to each and every present resident.

Consider for a moment the case of a man or woman who now works in one of the many industries in Torrance but who lives elsewhere. Probably many times each day at work, in stores or through social contacts that person meets and talks with others who already live in Torrance. If these contacts reflect an enthusiastic feeling for Torrance and an appreciation of its desirable features the non-resident at least is led to question whether or not he and his family would not be happier in a city where the residents are so obviously pleased with their condition. This is the first step toward their coming to Torrance to live. In the same way an indifferent attitude will have the opposite effect or at least fail to arouse the necessary doubt in the non-resident mind. To view the matter from a purely selfish standpoint what does it mean to the present resident to attract others to Torrance and so aid in its growth. This question brings up the matter of the most advantageous size of city in which to live. A great deal of study and much writing has been done on this question and certain conclusions are evident. Perhaps the best of the earlier work on this subject was done in England in preparation for the building of the complete new Garden City called Letchworth. The answer arrived at for the conditions there existing was about 30,000 population the ideal size of city. More recent studies in the United States have lead to the conclusion that under the conditions here the ideal city would be considerably larger and various estimates have placed the population of such a city at from 50,000 to 100,000 persons. We all realize that the larger of our metropolitan cities have outgrown their conditions of maximum living comfort and desirability. Great size has brought about conditions of crowding, lack of sunlight and fresh pure air, long distances to and from work and central trading areas, traffic congestion, noise and dirt. On the other hand, until a city has reached a certain size many desirable facilities remain only partially developed. Torrance is in that situation at the present time. It has an admirable start and the foundation that has been laid is fine and sure. However, the increased population of Torrance will improve at least four types of major facilities which affect the every day life of all.

The commercial and professional facilities for the distribution of goods and services are particularly well established in Torrance already. Even so increased sales and income from more population will enable the services and facilities to increase the variety and in many cases lower the price due to greater volume, less pro rata overhead and better equipment.

Personal conferences which the writer has had with big industrial engineers and executives in the East indicates already that a large local body of capable workmen is a strong point for attracting more industries. And every new industry which locates in Torrance benefits all either directly or indirectly.

Increased population means more pupils in the schools which in turn makes possible better equipment and a more varied line of training. The present high quality of education available in Torrance shows that every opportunity to widen the scope of facilities and courses offered will be immediately realized as more pupils make it possible.

Social activities and recreational areas and equipment can all be more varied and greater in extent as there are more people to support and use them. Parks, playgrounds, swimming pools, ball fields, tennis courts, auditoriums, theaters and clubs of all kinds will feel the immediate stimulus of increased population.

In discussing a matter of this kind one is reminded of the saying often seen on a sign in restaurants: "If you like our place, tell others; if not, tell us." That idea applies very aptly to the subjects discussed above.

You are doing yourself a good turn and helping Torrance and all its people every time you pass on a good word for your city. If there are things about Torrance you don't like, you can improve them and you have able and enthusiastic support in so doing. Your Chamber of Commerce in general and its Housing Department in particular are dedicated to the solution of any difficulty or disadvantage which affects you. You need only make the undesirable condition known to them and it will receive active attention. Nor is the Chamber of Commerce alone in such work. The service clubs, business men's organizations, Women's Club, Parent-Teachers' Association, American Legion and other organizations have already tackled many a stiff problem and solved it. If you haven't the contact to present your problem or difficulty directly come to your Chamber of Commerce and let's work together toward the greater and more beautiful Torrance of tomorrow.

BEAUTIFUL WEDDING AT CHURCH OF FLOWERS

Miss Treva R. Beard and A. Hollis Strait of Los Angeles were united at a beautiful wedding ceremony, Sunday morning at 9 o'clock at the Little Church of the Flowers in Glendale. Rev. J. Franklin Gasser, pastor of the Lake Street Baptist chapel, read the ceremony in the presence of more than 50 relatives and friends of the young couple.

The bride was attractively frocked in a brown transparent velvet ensemble, with matching accessories, and carried yellow tea roses and lilies of the valley. Her attendants, Mrs. Clyde Denslow of Hollywood and Mrs. W. H. Long of Los Angeles were attired in ensembles of eggshell and brown, with corsages of yellow roses.

The groom was attended by W. H. Long of Los Angeles and Joseph Mattox of Hollywood, acted as usher.

Following the ceremony, a buffet breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ivor L. Beard, 2666¾ South Orchard avenue. A feature of the morning was a mock wedding which afforded considerable amusement for the guests.

The groom is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Lee Strait of the Pepper Pot Gafe, Narbonne avenue, and is employed as a salesman for Charles H. Morris and son, printers of Los Angeles.

The bride's travelling dress was a blue and gray ensemble. On their return from a honeymoon trip to San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. Strait will be at home at 2109 South Estrella avenue, Los Angeles.

Invited guests included the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Harding; her aunts, Mrs. Thomas Carson and Mrs. Eliza Harding, both of Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. K. R. Baldwin, Mrs. Rodgers, Miss Louise Rodgers, Mr. and Mrs. Evan Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Sillman, Mrs. Nellie Dawson, Mrs. T. Child Study circle, who gave a very helpful and enlightening talk on "Parent Education," describing the duties of parents and the proper attitude that they should take in training their children.

"Seventy-five percent of the boys and girls in juvenile hall come from broken homes and homes lacking in parent co-operation," Mrs. King informed. "Parents should not leave the educational problems of their children entirely to the teacher, and instead of devoting so much time to material things, mothers and fathers should spend more time on building in their children, a character foundation for real men and women. Lists of instructive books on child training and child psychology were passed throughout the audience.

Many complimentary remarks on the kindergarten children's songs and the performance of their daily drills were audible. In this little act, Mrs. Baker and Miss Bliss attempted to give to the mothers an inkling of the manner in which a part of the children's time is spent.
