Shoppers Market Joins Lucky Discount Chain

Shoppers Markets today disclosed they are joining the Lucky Discount Supermarket chain and will assume the Lucky discount pricing program which offers lower prices on an everyday basis. The discount program means homemakers can shop any day of the week without having to wait for weekend specials and be assured of the best buys possible on every item.

Management of Lucky Stores, Inc., said public acceptance of their lower pricing plan has been very successful during the past three years.

"Food is an essential item and as such we believe it should be made available to the public at the very lowest possible price," Wayne H. Fisher, vice president and general manager said. "At Lucky, we have eliminated the expensive frills that most markets are adding to their cost of operation. We've discontinued the gimmicks, the give-aways, and the trading stamps that the consumer must ultimately pay for."

"We have streamlined store hours and these and other savings have been passed on to our customers," Fisher continued. "We've been able to reduce prices on every item that the law allows. Every item shows a savings of 1 to 15 cents and more. When you consider the number of items the average shopper purchases each week, the total savings is a considerable amount."

Store managers report that only the highest quality merchandise is offered. All nationally advertised brands of groceries are available, and top-quality meats with a money-back guarantee and Lucky's farm-fresh produce are featured.

Savings are clearly shown on shelf markers, and prices do not change unless the wholesale cost changes, according to Les Corbett, operations manager for the stores.

Corbett said one brand of TV dinners which normally sells for 65 cents is available "today, tomorrow, or next week" for 49 cents. He said many homemakers have been questioned about the pricing policy and reports the reaction is very favorable. "I like it," one shopper said, "my family is eating better for less."

Oceanology Fair Set Saturday

While most of the world's eyes are on space, more than 1,000 Explorers of the Los Angeles Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America will delve below the sea at the first National Oceanology Fair, to be held next Saturday at the U. S. Naval Station, Terminal Island.

The purpose of the day-long event, according to John Sherborne, chairman of the sponsoring committee, is to inspire the teenage guests to choose careers in various aspects of oceanology.

"It's surprising", says Sherborne, "that although three-quarters of our earth's surface is covered by water, it is only recently that the general public has come to realize the enormous rich natural resources that await a new generation of scientists and technicians."

• • •

SEVERAL acres of the Naval Station will be devoted to demonstrations and exhibits. The world's most elaborate diving suit, the Diving Monster, will be featured in the exhibit area.

Other exhibits, a number of them to be demonstrated, include wet and dry two-man submarines, automatic underwater map making equipment, an Underwater Sea Habitation model, similar to the Sea-Lab, working models of off-shore oil drilling and production platforms, deep sea photography and communications equipment, and various types of the newest SCUBA equipment.

• • •

SPONSORS of the Fair are Aerojet General Corp., Bissett - Berman, Blankfort Group, Halex, Inc., North American Aviation, Richfield Oil Co., and the Union Oil Co.

Explorers participating in the event will be awarded a special Oceanology patch. A number of the Explorers who have spent field time being briefed on various aspects of oceanology will describe their experiences with two of the Explorers participating in a submarine demonstration.

The band will leave the Walteria Park by chartered buses for the Coliseum at 5:45 p.m. and return after the game.

The Torrance Area Junior Youth Band under the direction of James Davidson participated in the annual Round-Up Days parade Sunday at Walteria and took first-place trophy.
