Jet Orders Reflect Travel, Cargo Boom

By REYNOLDS KNIGHT

Just 10 years ago American air travelers were introduced to jet planes; today U.S.-flag lines are buying new jets at a rate faster than they ever bought piston planes: at the start of October there were 597 jets on order, valued at $1.6 billion!

In the opinion of air industry leaders this demand for new jet aircraft directly reflects the swift response of travelers and shippers to the speed and capacity of jet planes. One indication of the boom in air travel is the fact that nearly all the passenger planes on order represent additions to capacity, rather than mere replacements.

Nor does the airframe industry (maker of planes) expect demand to slacken. Within five years, sales of jets should top another billion dollars, with much of this money being spent for jet cargo planes.

SNOW-MAKING—Spurred by memories of last winter's costly snow shortage, Northeastern ski resort operators in ever-growing numbers are disproving Mark Twain's adage that "everybody talks about the weather but nobody does anything about it."

Rather than relying solely on Mother Nature, they are greatly expanding their capacity for making artificial snow, according to Worthington Corp., a leading supplier of pumps and compressors, the key components used in snow-making. Many areas are installing snow-making gear for the first time, the company said, while others are adding to existing facilities.

Among those in the latter category is Mt. Tom in Holyoke, Mass., a small area that nevertheless ranked for a time last year as "the snow capital of the East" because of its man-made cover. Mt. Tom was one of the few areas that had the snow-making capacity to recover from the pre-Christmas thaw that stripped countless slopes of their natural cover and all but wiped out the normally lucrative holiday business.

This year, equipment sales indicate that Mt. Tom, Mt. Snow, Big Bromley, Stratton Mountain and many other major ski resorts in the Northeast will be better prepared to make their own snow should the real thing again be scarce, the Worthington people reported.

BITS O' BUSINESS—The gas industry generally is sharing America's prosperity, with record appliance sales anticipated for 1965 . . . U.S. exports in 1965 topped imports by $6.9 billion, reaching a record $25.6 billion . . . Car sales early in October indicated a very sharp rise in demand over 1965 . . . Talk is heard that Congress may pass legislation to lighten the losses suffered each year from hurricanes . . . Another record-breaking year is forecast for 1966, with substantial gains in gross national product, disposable income and industrial production. This economic forecaster also sees a five-year span of further growth beyond 1966.

A WOMAN'S WORLD—It's no secret that women control the family purse, but it may come as a shock to some men that women now dominate buying in areas thought of as strictly a male province. Women purchase 89 per cent of all remodeling materials and 67 per cent of the hardware sold at retail stores, according to the Tile Council of America, which also reports that women buy 94 per cent of new homes and own 74 per cent of all suburban homes.

Part of this real estate dominance may be attributed to the fact that more single women head households than single men. But, whatever the cause, manufacturers and retailers of home building materials are directing their selling efforts more and more to women. Ceramic tile, now quality certified by the Council, has long been of interest to both men and women. But, where the durability and over-all low cost of ceramic tile were once thought to be of concern only to men, these attributes now are demonstrated to women, along with tile's appearance and ease of maintenance.

Women's buying awareness undoubtedly holds true for many other types of goods, too, the Council said, because feminine dominance goes well beyond the real estate market. Women, in fact, control 75 per cent of the national wealth.

THINGS TO COME—High-capacity portable heater, so potent that five of them would equal the output of the regular furnace in a six-room house . . . Hollow handle toothbrush that becomes sipping tube for children rinsing teeth . . . New hunting knife, sheathed in own handle when not in use . . . Portable table lamp, battery-powered, can be used anywhere . . . Rechargable electric lighter, will light three packs before recharging needed . . . New flexible 40-inch aircraft cable for fastened lawn furniture, bicycles or any other easily stolen goods . . . Adjustable window display rack to hold plywood, fabric or paper displays.

SCIENCE NEWS—In these days of drought in the Northeast it is of special interest to learn of a "dowsers' convention" held earlier this month in Vermont. A "dowser" in case you're wondering, claims to find water with a forked stick and suprisingly, many of them do. The four-year-old Dowsers Society, sponsor of the convention, now has several hundred members . . . A report of the U.S. Public Health Service will disclose details of a new program to reduce smoking by use of psychiatry . . . An associate professor of medicine at University of California at Los Angeles says "more glamour, more pay and more of the glory of medical accomplishment" will attract new nurses . . . Post-graduate medical instruction in some 100 Southern California hospitals will be linked this fall by television. Broadcasts weekly, the programs will be "scrambled" so initiates cannot listen in.

Law In Action

Most Californians own life insurance, a family asset protected by special laws. Unless the policy is quite large, the family gets it clear of any claims of creditors.

Your lawyer will review your life insurance when he plans your estate, drafts your will, and considers ways to reduce death, gift, or income taxes. A gift of a life insurance policy may reduce the size of your estate. Sometimes when the need to protect the beneficiary or family has been reduced, an outright gift may reduce death taxes.

Giving the insurance policy may call for gift taxes. But as a rule, they are less than other death taxes. Insurance may relieve the need for paying the expenses of the last illness, taxes, and other things without having to sell assets such as a going business.

• • •

AN INSURANCE policy paid out of money earned after marriage is community property, owned half and half by the husband and wife even though only the husband, say, is named as the insured. Hence only half of the policy (where taxable) may be taxed to the husband's estate should he die first.

Without the wife's consent the husband can only give away one half of a policy bought out of community funds. Without such consent he cannot name his sister, for example, to get the whole estate. He can at most give away half.

In GI Insurance, as a rule, the wife has waived her rights under the community property laws, and her husband (when acting in good faith) can name anyone he likes as beneficiary.

• • •

WHEN A person owns a large policy, he may wish to name several beneficiaries, or he may set up a trust.

Insurance policies offer many options for settlement. Besides serving the needs of the beneficiary, a policy may have tax features, upon which one might well consult a lawyer.

Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.
