Crime Rate on Increase in Major Metropolitan Areas

By REYNOLDS KNIGHT

Travel a lot in your business? Well, the next time you pack your bag it might be well to include a manual on the art of self-defense. It could come in handy.

The crime rate has been rising in many American cities; and it is not just the recent riots that are to blame. Crime — everything from muggings to house robberies —is on the upswing.

If you are physically attacked you can use whatever force is necessary to protect yourself. But, remember this: there's a possibility that when you get into an altercation the court will decide you're the attacker. For instance, if someone calls you a dirty name or insults your wife your recourse is to call the police. If you assault the namecaller you're legally cast as the attacker and liable for damages.

• • •

YOU MIGHT think of carrying a gun for protection. This is not a good idea. First of all you might wind up with shooting an innocent person and you might even shoot yourself (as some policemen have been known to do when chasing criminals.) If you insist on carrying a gun remember you need a permit. And the permit is good only in your state. Carry it across a state line and you're in difficulty. There's no such thing as a federal permit for carrying a gun.

Experts suggest that the best protection you can carry is either a stout walking stick or a loud police-type whistle. Tear-gas pens can also be used, but make sure they're legal in your state.

KING COTTON was dethroned in a revolution sparked by artificially high prices and cotton's marketing complacency.

Rayon and other man-made fibers were developed, and foreign cotton production was encouraged by high price supports on U. S. cotton — and the King toppled.

Now, with newly pegged prices, an unprecedentedly large reserve supply and a billion-bushel crop predicted this fall, soybean industry leaders are fearful that this miracle bean may become the latest agricultural humpty-dumpty.

"For the first year in history," says M. D. McVay, vice president and head of the vegetable oil division of Cargill, Inc., "soybean supplies have been adequate, yet markets have failed to grow."

• • •

SOYBEAN MARKET growth amazing during the last 25 years, has come to a halt at a time when sheer momentum would have seemed to preclude a pause. Why?

The Cargill executive cites two reasons: price and competition. The Department of Agriculture has pegged support prices to farmers at $2.50 and sales prices from government stocks at $2.86. Soybeans have lost their competitive flexibility.

Competition, in the form of substitute oilseeds such as Russian sunflower and Canadian rape seed, fish meal and oil and man-made protein source, urea, have enjoyed booming markets once commanded by the soybean.

EXPO 67 traffic is jamming upstate highways in New York. At times cars and buses have been backed up as much as five miles at the Canadian border. On weekends, service areas along the route have been so crowded that New York State Thruway officials had to prohibit buses from stopping at several of them. The Thruway Authority mentioned in its report that toll revenues had risen 10 per cent from levels of last year. Many motorists feel this extra traffic shouldn't have come as a surprise.

Bankers have been urged to adapt their computer systems to fully handle basic banking functions before succumbing to the lures of the "checkless society."

Benjamin W. Taunton, banking and finance industry manager for Honeywell's electronic data processing division, told some 100 bankers at a recent computer seminar at the Summit Hotel here that a bank's foremost concern should be to set up a basic banking system on a third-generation computer, rather than to try to modify older systems for use on a new computer.

• • •

ATTEMPTS TO computerize customer service tasks before systems have been adapted to handle fundamental banking needs he said, "might create problems and delay development of an effective data processing system."

"Computer manufacturers are being pressured to develop highly specialized computer applications associated with credit cards and other 'checkless society' functions, yet they have barely scratched the surface in meeting the requirements for on-line, real-time banking systems," Taunton said.

POTATO harvesters that can tell spuds from stones will soon make their appearance on farms. An air-vacuum tube sucks up the potatoes from a conveyor belt in the harvester but leaves heavier stones and other debris. On some terrain, it is a one-man operation.

El Camino Adds Four to Industry Division Staff

An administrative intern, a librarian and two full-time instructors in the Division of Industry and Technology have been added to the staff of El Camino College for the coming year.

Eugene G. Kilpatrick will work part-time this fall as administrative intern in cooperation with UCLA's Kellogg Program for training future junior college administrators preparing for their doctorate degrees.

After earning his bachelor's and master's degrees in chemistry at Emory University in Georgia, Kilpatrick taught at Avondale High School in Avondale, Ga., and at Miami-Dade Junior College in Huntington Beach.

• • •

LAST SPRING he was assistant to the president of Golden West Junior College in Huntington Beach.

Mrs. Vonna L. Brown replaces Miss Mabel Schulte as reference libration at El Camino. Miss Schulte retired last spring.

Mrs. Brown received her bachelor's degree from the University of Colorado and her degree in library science from the University of Oklahoma. She worked as librarian at Lutheran High School for seven years and as a cataloger at the Technical Documents Center of Hughes Aircraft Co. in Culver City.

• • •

TWO FORMER part-time El Camino instructors, Frank D. Wissman and Robert Prather, will begin teaching on a full-time basis at the college this fall for the Division of Industry and Technology.

Wissman, who will teach police science courses, attended Glendale Junior College and USC. He has taught various police science courses at Pasadena City College for four years, at the Los Anleges Police Training Academy, and at El Camino since 1954.

Prather, new refrigeration instructor, received journeyman's training through an apprentice program at Frank Wiggins Trade School and is a certified journeyman for the Commercial Refrigeration Co., where he has worked for 23 years. He has taught part-time at El Camino for six years.
