GOING STRONG FOR RACE FOR PENNANT

cracked a hot one toward third and landed safely at first. The mighty Sanger took a firm grip on his trusty stick and clouted a long one over the right fielder's head, and then leisurely proceeded around the circuit until he passed third, and then, Oh boy, he did run to beat that ball for a homer.

The Blake-Moffitts got their revenge in the third, though, when all hands waited to the plate, smacking the pill for five safe ones. In the Utees' half Demon Gomes cracked one on the nose for two sacks. Sanger and Beck shifted positions in the fourth, and right off the Blake-Moffitts commenced to clout the ball again, landing on Beck for two more safe ones and two counters. The best the Utees could do in their half was to let Newby get hit by a pitched ball. Although their opponents copped three more safe ones in the fifth, the Utees held them scoreless. Same remark will cover our half, excepting the hits.

The sixth netted said opponents another marker. The above-mentioned Demon Gomes, having reached first when their third sacked muffed an infield pop, stole home right under their very armpits. The Blake-Moffitts did nothing in the seventh, evidently feeling quite safe in their two-run lead. However, the Toolmakers had only begun to fight, as Sanger evidenced, when he stepped to the plate and smacked one for half the distance, then stole third, and scored on Beck's sacrifice. Malott got a free ticket and scored while Big Pep was playing tag between second and first. That tied 'em. And the fans moved over to the lee side of the diamond, faced the blast, and commenced to yell.

The Blake-Moffitts did nothing in the eighth. But Gomes with a do or die men, first up for the Utees, had all hands playing 'way back, and then he pulled the unexpected. The Demon laid down as pretty a bunt toward third as we have ever paid four bits and war tax to see. Then he stole second, and Templeton sacrificed him to third. Newby landed on one for a safety, sending Gomes across with the winning run. The Blake-Moffitts run in a double at this point—regular Tinker to Evers to Chance stuff, and put away both Newby and Widener.

Then the wind blew some more Saturday, February 12, Union Tool Team will play the Alexander Giants at their Park in Los Angeles. The Giants have entered the Suburban League, taking over the franchise of the Pasadena All-Stars.

UNIVERSAL TEAM PLAY

rance running. In the fifth Kessler let them get away with two hits, a walk, and a balk, which resulted in two more tallies. Gomes got to first in Torrance's half, but was caught trying to make second.

Kessler was yanked in the sixth, Sanger climbing the mound, and Newby being sent to the left garden. The first Universal man up was permitted to pass unmolested, and then scored on two sacrifices and an error. In our half, the unusual again happened when Rigg was whiffed.

The seventh was a nightmare to Torrance players and fans. How these birds could hit. They could put that old pill just where they wanted it at any time they desired. They must have been thinking they were at practice, because each of them got up and took a smash at the ball, landing safely four times, taking a walk, a safe bunt, and three times trotting safely over the pan. Torrance was bewildered, and in their half they could hit nothing safer than infield grounders.

In the eighth, Torrance gave an exhibition of real fielding. This time it was the Evers to Tinker to Chance variety, with Peppin, Bouett and Malott taking those respective roles.

With all they had, the Universals were not satisfied, and in the ninth they continued to rub it in. The first man up got a hit. The second was an easy out. But the third, in triumphant glee, swung his mighty bat on a fast one and trotted home on the heels of his comrade who had been more lenient. A faint glimmer of hope rose in Torrance hearts in our half—the hope that the game would not go down in history as a complete shut-out—when Newby landed a pretty single, was sacrificed to second by Rigg, and Malott landed one safe, and Newby in a desperate spurt to score, but was caught by inches.

Score 9-0, and it was more than they could chew.

Next Sunday, February 13, the Torrance Merchants will play the Cline-Cline Team at Torrance.

TORRANCE NEWS ITEMS

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Trefry of San Pedro were Torrance visitors Tuesday.

Rosalind Paige visited at Geraldine Rader's at Redondo Beach last week.

Mrs. Frank graves of N. Arlington is visiting relatives in Garvanza this week.

Chas. Curtiss of the Dominguez Land Company office was greatly surprised to hear a well-known voice from "Back East" greet him over long distance a few days ago. It proved to be that of a chum from his home town, Mr. Peter Wenge of Oluni, S. D., cashier of the First National Bank there. Mr. Wenge is touring California for a couple of months and greatly enjoyed the reunion and the hospitality of his old-time friend.

Judge G. T. Graves, stopping with his son Frank, N. Arlington has made very pleasing recovery from his serious illness of two months. He contemplates moving soon to Redondo Beach to his new home, recently purchased at Guadalupe Avenue. Besides his wife he will be accompanied there by his daughter, Orchid Conarro, coloratura soprano, who, at her home in the East, was preparing for a concert tour, until summoned by telegram to the bedside of her father and all engagements cancelled. Redondo Beach's musical colony will have a pleasing voice added to its personnel, thereby, and Torrance will be the loser. Would that we all had been real estate dealers—Redondo would have had to wait.

Long Beach's Exposition

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Paige were visitors at the Long Beach Exposition Friday. They report that even the huge Auditorium is too small for an exhibition upon the scale on which Long Beach has carried it out so successfully, so far as crowds and exhibits go. The booths hold many interesting and novel displays from the Aluminum Kettle, "Made in Long Beach," and that "Cannot be boiled dry," up to wicker furniture and automobile bodies, also built there. They also spoke of the souvenirs given away there—one of the cleverest being long daintily covered feather pens that "really write," these from the Freeman McKenzie display and the refreshing drinks that advertised a big candy making firm.

(Fiesta Promoters are asked to take notice.) One of the most beautiful and artistic displays was that of the interior decorator, J. Walter Fischer. The Queen and all her attendant ladies-in-waiting, beautifully gowned, were introduced by name and town to the big audience, from a bower of greenery upon the stage. The Long Beach Band was heard in selections from "Il Traviatore," other opera airs were sung by a mixed chorus of fifty voices, a woman's chorus sang "The Rose Maiden," most charmingly, and a vocal lady won hosts of applause by her graceful dancing.
