FISHING TRIP

Promptly at 3:00 a. m. Sunday, June 19, the alarm clock began buzzing and we left our snug beds and started on our fishing trip. Just as the day was dawning we called the roll at our starting point. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Flood, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Malone, Mr. George Parr and Miss Thacker, all answered "Present," and we loaded our luggage and enriched John D. for awhile. Reaching Azusa we left our machines and took an auto stage for about eight miles. A mile above Azusa we passed the Southern California Edison Power Plant. This was the last sign of industry we saw until we returned. The ride to the auto-control was uneventful, except for some severe jolts. Here we transferred ourselves and belongings to a wagon stage, and in some western style headed farther into the wilds. The road here left the hillside and followed the course of the river. The girls began to count the number of times we crossed the river, but soon lost out. By this time the mountains were towering high on each side and all were impressed by the grand peaks that loomed in the distance. The only "eye-sore" was the charred stumps and brush, reminders of the disastrous fire in this vicinity last fall. Reaching Follows Camp, which is about sixteen miles from Azusa, we ate lunch, while our guide saddled the horses and packed our luggage on two mules. From here the odds were in favor of the girls, as they were to ride horses, while we boys were to ride shank's ponies to our camp on Iron Fork, a mere fifteen mile hike.

About 11 o'clock we sallied forth from Follows Camp firmly determined to reach Iron Fork or bust. Gee! Fellows! but that water was cold. Ye gods and little fishes! However, a little thing like that could not daunt us, and on we went. Reaching Camp Bonita, nestled in the mouth of Cattle Canyon, we took a short rest and then started the home stretch. Everything went fine, except that occasionally Roy would remind us that he had a shorter wheel-base than the rest, until we reached the mouth of the narrow. Here our troubles began. Away we went up the top of the mountain we could see the high line trail and our guide informed us that due to the late rains we would not be able to go through the narrows, but would have to go up the mountain side and finish our journey on the high line trail. Little realizing what this meant, we bucked high water and had trail for some two miles and reached the point where we left the river. Imagine our dismay when we saw that the trail led almost straight up a loose shale slide. We had come too far to back down, and tightening our belts we started on the grind. Every time we would take a step we would slide back two. The hot sun beating down upon us must have affected one of our party, as we could hear him ordering a chocolate ice cream soda. At last we reached the top, and what a relief it was to recline upon the soft rocks of the trail and look down a thousand feet and view the river as it wound its tortuous way. On the opposite ridge the fire had failed to ravage, and the beauty of the well-timbered slope repaid us in a great measure for the task we had just performed. By now the shadows were beginning to play around the deep canyon, so we could not tarry long. For some two miles we followed this high line, and we'll say it was high. A misstep at any point and one would get a free toboggan slide for some 1000 feet. At last we reached the trail leading to Iron Fork. Across the canyon, perched like an eagle's nest, we could see the hut belonging to Stanley and Miller, who claim to have a bonanza mine. Far below us we could see the roof of our home, sweet home. Never has a sight been more welcome than that. Tears of thanks were near the surface, not from homesickness, but every one was so hungry. While we were yet some 500 feet above camp, we caught our first sight of Oliver Justice, "Old Hickory," who was to be our host for the week. There he stood, a typical mountaineer, with long white beard, stooped shoulders, but young in spite of years. Making a short turn we made a sudden descent and reached camp. While here, who is an old friend of "Hickory," was arranging for camping, our guide hastily unpacked our mules and left us to the tender mercies of our host.

While the men were busy making the beds under a large oak tree, "Friend Hickory" was entertaining the ladies with stories of shooting scraps, showing where the bullet holes were and where the men lay when found, and of how mountain lions had come into camp and caught three of his cats. By the time we retired for the night there were wild cats and lion on every limb of our sheltering oak.

But we were too tired to let fears bother us long, and soon all were sleeping about twenty knots an hour. Roy began to worry about the numerous tasks to be done in the morning, and in his sleep accused Dick of stealing all the candles.

By five the sun had routed us out of bed and we were busy rigging up our fishing poles, all except Geo. Parr. He sneaked around and tried to steal some of Hickory's strawberries, and was very much peeved to find that Hickory had taken the precaution to park a swarm of bees in the patch. We forgot all the grief and sorrow of the trip as soon as we began fishing, for our luck was good and we had no trouble in securing a goodly mess of the speckled beauties. From then on sleep, fish and eat, mostly fish and eat. Late Friday night our guide returned with the horses, and early Saturday we bade "Hickory" "adieu" and promised to see him next year. The return was easy, as it was practically all down hill. It was made in record time, and nothing of interest happened until we reached the last crossing before Follow Camp. Here Flood perched himself on a rock and in imitating a rooster flapped his wings too hard and took a header into the river. We found both the stage and a hot dinner awaiting us at Follows, and Robbins shocked us by throwing the bones over his left shoulder. By 4:30 we were again in Azusa, homeward bound, all sorry our trip was at an end, and determined to go again next year.

LICENSE ORDINANCE ADOPTED

The proposed license ordinance, which was given its first reading before the board of trustees last Tuesday evening, seems to be about the fairest of any in this part of the country. The trustees visited a number of nearby cities and found that being charged in the various other cities.

As it is proposed, the merchants and other people who are established in Torrance will pay about a dollar a month as an occupational tax.

Where there are two distinct lines of business under the same roof the owner will of course pay for both. For example, a hardware store and a real estate office together. Another example is of a poolroom, barber shop and restaurant. In this case the owner will pay only two licenses, as the pool room and barber shop are combined. A drug store will pay only one license, although there are many kinds of business, but all under the same head.

Most cities charge a large fee in excess of what the trustees of Torrance have laid out, but as Trustee Smith was heard to say the other day: "There is no other city anywhere like Torrance. So why should Torrance try to follow or pattern after other cities."

STREETS GET ATTENTION

Trustee Fitzhugh is having a hard time trying to put Arlington avenue in a passable condition. The base of the road is very poor and will not hold a good surface. Last week the street was scraped, springled and rolled, but two days after it was hardly apparent that any work had been done. Mr. Fitzhugh deserves credit for his efforts, however, and he is now turning his attention towards the road in front of the P. E. The two main approaches to the city, Redondo Boulevard and Arlington avenue, are in bad condition. Let us hope that some attention will be given to Redondo Boulevard in the near future.

ATTENTION, SINGERS!

All song lovers are invited to join the Torrance Choral Society immediately and help make the Torrance Fiesta a grand success. Register in either drug store.

WOMEN'S BENEFIT ASSOCIATION HOLD RALLY DAY IN LOS ANGELES

The Women's Benefit Association of the Macabees held a rally day on Tuesday, June 23, at the Walker Theatre, Los Angeles. Mrs. Minnie Aydelotte, Supreme Commander of the W. B. A., was present. A class initiation of 150 was held. Thirteen new members of the W. B. A. of Macabees of Torrance were in this class.

The order is working diligently for the progressive convention in 1923. The first meeting to be held in Los Angeles and the other meetings to follow at different points on the coast. This women's order is only twenty-nine years old and has a reserve fund of $14,000,000. Their membership is 210,000, and they expect to reach 300,000 by 1923.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS AND MODERN WOODMEN HOLD JOINT MEETING

A joint meeting of the Royal Neighbors and the Modern Woodmen of America was held Wednesday evening at Steffen Hall with a large attendance of members and their friends. The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock by the Oracle, Mrs. May McKinley. A talk was given, telling the object of the meeting, after which a musical program was rendered. Piano solo by Mrs. Rodnick, a group of songs by Mr. Chas. McCullum, piano solo by Mrs. P. D. Murry, songs by Mr. Warren Webster, quartette by Mesdames R. C. Kite and Rose Funder and Messrs. Webster and McCullum.

After the program delicate and delicious refreshments were served by the Royal Neighbors.

The evening was so enjoyable that plans were made to have social meetings often. The next regular meeting will be held July 6. All members are requested to be present as business of importance is to be transacted at this time.

ATTENDS BANQUET

Mr. Charles A. Curtiss of the Dominguez Land Corporation, attended a banquet of the Ellis Club at the Leighton Hotel in Los Angeles last Tuesday evening. This was a final meeting of the club for the season. All activities being suspended until the fall.

LEARN TO SWIM

People visiting Venice during the summer season will have an opportunity to learn to swim in the big bath house, which has again been thrown open to the public. Prof. Kendall, one of the most noted instructors on the Pacific coast, is in charge, and he guarantees to learn you to swim in six lessons, a fact that is attested to by the hundreds who have already enjoyed his instructions. Everyone should know how to swim and here is a fine opportunity to learn while on your vacation.

REAL HOSPITALITY

While in attendance at the editorial meeting at Venice last week, J. Frishman and family of this paper delightfully enjoyed the true Southern hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Derer of the Windward Apartments, one of the most popular in the beach city, and the only one equipped with ocean salt water baths. The Windward is ideally located and the summer vacationist will find this a real congenial, home-like apartment house while there, and where even the children find a welcome, so unusual in most beach apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Fess of Arlington avenue entertained Mr. and Mrs. Reed of Bardstoun. They attended the joint meeting of the Royal Neighbors and Modern Woodmen of America Wednesday evening.

The next regular card club meeting of the Macabees will be given at Steffen Hall next Tuesday evening, July 5.
