The author had just slipped into the village bookstore and bought a copy of his own book.

Of course the bookseller didn't know him.

"And how is this volume selling?" he asked.

"It's the only book we've sold this month," the old bookseller replied.

"Why, then, that makes it the leading one of the six best sellers," he joyously remarked and briskly went his way.

"Where are you going with that building?" yelled the stationmaster to Farmer Wheatseaf.

"That's my new chicken coop that came by express today," replied the farmer. "I'm carting it home."

"Hustle that back, quick!" replied the stationmaster. "You've made a mistake. That's our station."
