OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY OF TORRANCE

TALKS BY THOSE WHO THINK

"IT will not do to jump to the conclusion that the war has been paid for and that the problem of war finance is at an end. On the contrary, the remaining public debt of $21,500,000,000 is a matter of major importance." So says

R. C. Leffingwell, member of J. P. Morgan & Co., discussing present financial conditions. "Its SAYS treatment will have the most profound effect MORGAN upon the welfare of our countrymen," declared OFFICIAL the banker recently. "Of this entire debt more than $8,600,000,000, or 40 per cent, will mature within the next four years, or thereabouts. Upwards of $3,000,000,000 of the debt so maturing consists of the bonds of the third Liberty loan, which are not subject to call for redemption before maturity, and are selling in the market at such prices as make extensive purchases of them by the treasury for retirement before maturity improbable, if not impossible.

"Of the remainder of the short-dated debt upwards of $4,000,000,000 consists of treasury notes, the last of which now outstanding matures on December 15, 1927, and $900,-000,000 consists of treasury certificates.

"It derogates nothing from the skill with which the treasury operations have been conducted since the Victory loan was floated to call attention to the fact that on the whole they have borne the character of operations in debt reduction. The actual amount of debt reduction effected is approximately equal to the entire amount of the Victory loan, the last of the Liberty loans.

"Furthermore, these treasury operations, since June, 1920, have been conducted under the favorable auspices of an easing money market, with a consequent tendency toward appreciation in market price of issues made from time to time, and racilitation of their absorption.

"It does not take much imagination, therefore, to understand that if the government's policy were materially altered, whether by undertaking new expenditures for whatever purpose, however beneficent, or by reducing revenues, to such an extent as to require the issue of United States government bonds, notes or certificates to an amount exceeding the amount of those maturing, the treasury would encounter very different conditions, and would be obliged to enter into competition with the bond market for investment capital.

"The net effect of the treasury's operations since Armistice day has been to release investment capital, both because of the important reduction in the gross debt, and also because of the policy persistently and wisely pursued of adhering almost exclusively to short maturities for meeting its current requirements. The capital fund thus released by the treasury of the United States has, unhappily, in large measure been lapped up for public or semi-public purposes by the borrowings of states and municipalities, subsidized and stimulated by the constitutional exemption from

"Nevertheless, the treasury has conferred a priceless benefit upon the American people by pursuing the wise policy of debt reduction and relieving the business man and the farmer, the merchant and the industrialist, in meeting their own requirements for financing, from the competition of the treasury."

WHO'S WHO IN THE NEWS

THE Nationalist party in Germany is using the good feeling expressed toward Admiral Von Tirpitz on his seventy-fifth birthday recently as the opening gun in their efforts to place him in the field as the presidential candidate in place of Von Hindenburg. The latter's age is ADMIRAL von should he be chosen. He is older than the TIRPITZ former director of Germany's submarine com-

former director of Germany's submarine cam-paign during the world war. Hindenburg's connection with the Bavarian revolt is also held against him now. Twenty years ago Von Tirpitz first came into prominence at the annual fall maneuvers of the German navy, where his performance was of such high standard that the kaiser could not refrain from mentioning the fact in the royal message sent to the commander, Freiherr von der Goltz. History next finds him promoted to the chief of staff, in charge of Kiel. The plans for the maneuvers of the next year were drawn up by him, and the kaiser was afterward the closest enthusiast of this man of ideas.

When he became secretary of state—years before then— 1898—he began a campaign, for the first time in the history of the country, to strengthen the naval arm equal to the power of the military arm.

A naval base was established at Kiel, the methods of the engineering corps were modernized, and new educational regulations were drawn up for the improvement of the stock of future officers

Fifty years ago; when this gray-haired patriarch entered the Prussian "navy"—theoretically so called—he found the vast German sea power consisting of a few obsolete frigates. When the World war began he was commander of the second largest navy in the world. And it was because of second largest havy in the world. And it was because of him that Germany had this second largest navy in the world; thanks to him, indeed, and his "Two to Three" policy, which developed the naval power of the kaiser at a jealous, ever-watchful pace with the growth of the British fleet. But he is not an Anglophobe, surprising as it may seem. His children were educated in England, and he was known, before the World war at least, as an admirer of all things British in character and achievement.

Designs for clothes at present are drawn from centuries and from countries widely separated. There can be little excuse for a woman being unbecomingly dressed; she has a choice of almost every style, from Grecian draperies to the modern chemise frock. Each country has left the imprint of some particular fashion.

Each country has left the imprint of some particular fashion. And now comes to Torrance a little shop, a quaint store for milady to muse in—where the styles of geography are typified, and where the well dressed girl or woman will eventually turn—Van Andles' Specialty Shop at 1814 Sartori street.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Andle are from San Francisco, a city renowned for its styles and fashions. They have opened their store in Torrance embracing the most tempting things for feminine wear—ladles' dresses, skirts, sweaters, furnishings and many other articles of wear and adornment that the lady of style will find hard to resist. There is not a shody thing in the whole stock outsite. There is not a shoddy thing in the whole store rings a true keynote throughout.

rings a true keynote throughout.

And this is also a pleasing art emporium, a little, bright shop of pottery, baskets, pounded brass, party-favors, candles and candlesticks, chinaware and a great array of other things for the home.

The Van Andle family is a most pleasant one. They settled here after looking over the Southland, and after deciding upon a one hundred per cent specialty service for the Torrance public. Their patrons may always feel assured that their stocks will be plentiful and the variety of goodly range.

One shopping at Van Andles' Specialty Shop cannot but notice the thoughtful, courteous attentions that are paid to the one who comes to purchase, or just to look. It is a friendly store with a most pleasing management, and the articles are worthy of the best shops in big cities. It is a pleasure to tell the true facts about this serviceable shop, because those facts are real facts, and they spell satisfaction to you, ladies of Torrance.
