If Johnny Dundee is really sincere in his announcement that he has relinquished the featherweight crown and will not defend it he becomes a unique figure among recognized champions of accepted weights.

Dundee also places himself in the odd position of having no titles—having lost the junior lightweight title to Kid Sullivan a few months ago.

Last summer Dundee was acquiring titles—he won two—after seeking a crown in vain for 13 years. Now he is giving one of them away. Can't beat that.

If the Yankees do hold their heads up in the closing weeks of the campaign and land their fourth straight pennant, the Bush-Selous battery will break into another world's series—just 12 years after tasting their first bit of world's series melon.

'400' IS NO MORE; MRS. STOKES CUTS SOCIALLY ELECT TO 300

By MARGERIE PICKARD Central Press Correspondent NEW YORK—The "400" is no more; now it is the "300." Society is SOCIETY again.

Mrs. Sylvanus Stokes Jr. is responsible. Mrs. Stokes, nee Margaret Fainestock, daughter of a family that has enjoyed social prestige since its origin, decided that it was time to rid the smart set that is ensconced at Newport of the climbing, nouveau riche fringe.

The dowager Mrs. Vanderbilt—Mrs. Stokes' family, or rather the dictatorial of the colony at Newport, and her palatial home, "The Breakers," is where one must be invited to "lunch." But of late Mrs. Vanderbilt has not given much of her time to active leadership; she has been content to relax on her laurels.

So Mrs. Stokes is lifting high the torch of ultra-exclusiveness. Mrs. Stokes' family, or rather the dictatorial of the colony at Newport, and her palatial home, "The Breakers," is where one must be invited to "lunch." But of late Mrs. Vanderbilt has not given much of her time to active leadership; she has been content to relax on her laurels.

When she married the wealthy son of Sylvanus Stokes of Newport and New York in 1918 the match was considered ideal romantically, socially and financially.

Of course it must be nice just to be a millionaire, but according to those who know the delicate workings of the social "caste" system, to be a millionaire and not in society is a dreadful fate—far worse than being a poor relation to a socially prominent family.

Mrs. L. A. Wilson entertained fifteen young friends at dinner Friday afternoon in honor of her sister, Miss Ethel Brown, who, with her mother, left Sunday for their home in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Perlewitz of 25th street are entertaining the former's brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Perlewitz of Salt Lake City.

new riches. And she has seen some of them succeed to an alarming extent. It has long been foreseen in aristocratic Newport that something would have to be done to obstruct the social climbers and Mrs. Stokes is endeavoring to do it.
