Wisdom From the Steppes Sayings of the Russians

If you are afraid of the wolf, don't go into the forest. Men carry their superiority inside, animals outside. Where money speaks, truth keeps silent. Should a peasant become a landlord he will flay the peasants.

Today's instalment of this series of presentations of the proverbs of the various peoples is devoted to proverbs from the Russian:

Time does not bow to you, you must bow to time. If all fools wore white caps we should look like a flock of sheep. Trust in God, but mind your own business. Measure thy cloth ten times; thou canst cut it but once. If you be a cock, crow; if a hen, lay eggs. A great head has great cares. The greatest king must at last be put to bed with a shovel. Seven never wait for one. The burden is light on the shoulder of another. Pray to God, but keep rowing to the shore. Better under the beard of the old than the whip of the young. The future belongs to him who knows how to wait. Select your wife with your ears rather than with your eyes. There is only one wicked woman in the world, but every husband thinks it is his wife. A woman laughs when she can, and cries when she wishes. The first wife is from God, the second from man, the third from the devil. Wash a pig as much as you like, it will always go into the mud. The seller can manage with one eye, the buyer requires a hundred.
