Vanderlip Studies Estate From Ocean

In order to study the site of their new home at Palos Verdes Estates from every possible angle, the Frank A. Vanderlip family spent Sunday cruising about Portuguese Bend on the yacht Henrietta. They were guests of Clyde Burr, Warren Penny, and Mr. and Mrs. Ebbon Musick. The party went along the entire shore line of Palos Verdes from San Pedro to Redondo Beach, studying not only the Vanderlip private estate at Portuguese Bend but also the property owned by the Vanderlip syndicate and the Palos Verdes pleasure.

In the party, besides the hosts, were Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, Mrs. Narcissa Vanderlip, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Lawyer, Mr. and Mrs. Don K. Lawyer, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Webster Holmes, Miss Merwin, Miss Mary Gray, Norman Merwin, Dana Hogan, Barton Stebbins, Floyd Cole, and Harry Benedict. Mr. Vanderlip is now working on the landscaping and architectural plans for his new $250,000 home near Portuguese Bend. Actual construction work will begin this fall. The Vanderlips have become permanent residents of Palos Verdes Estates, as is evidenced by the fact that Mr. Vanderlip last week accepted the presidency of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce and announced his desire to put his shoulder to the wheel as an ordinary California citizen.

Mr. and Mrs. Townsend are building on Beacon street east of Narbonne avenue.

Visitors at the Randles home on Pennsylvania avenue Saturday were Mrs. Brown and Mr. Martin, of Los Angeles.

An auto trip to Beverly Hills was a pleasant event Sunday for Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Hinton and Miss Lola Hinton, their hostess, Mrs. Everett Isenhower, and Marion Isenhower.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Brown and son, Burton Brown, of Long Beach, were recent business visitors here.

Mrs. F. E. Boyer of Applan Way was a weekend guest at the home of her son, H. F. Boyer, of Los Angeles.

Spring Moving and the Desert Again—The "Yes and No" Country—Direct Speech, and Blunt—Swift Justice

By W. HAROLD KINGSLEY

AMERICANS cannot be thoroughly happy in the Spring unless they are on the move. And where on earth are there so many delightful places to go as in California?

The urge to "get away from here" which surges in the breast of most residents of this continent is easily explained. All our ancestors were migratory—else they never would have come to America. From them we inherit a love for traveling.

THE desert is a lure to anyone born and reared to maturity in the middle west. Particularly the desert in spring—when the yellow carpet of sand is transformed into a sea of color by gay desert flowers—yellow, blue, purple, lavender, and red.

IF I had my way about it I would have a number of homes. I would live near a California beach in summer, on the desert during March and April, in New England during May and June, on the Riviera in the winter, and in a well-treed middle western district during the brilliant days of fall—provided the middle western city was within a few miles of a large stadium in which hotly contested football games were played of a Saturday. Occasionally I would run over to France in June and — And what I shall do is to remain in a house in Torrance and work for my living.

Dreams are to be pardoned in the spring. I beg your pardon. BACK to the desert again. My best friend says it is a "yes and no" country. It surely is. People speak directly, without restraints, with bluntness. It is refreshing. Folks are direct rather than vague. You know what they mean.

THOUSANDS have hurried to the desert hills near Kramer to participate in the gold rush brought on by a rich new strike. Many of the participants are green in the ways of the desert. They came without food, without water.

A city dandy approached an old prospector who had pitched his camp. A large barrel of water stood by. Said the city dandy: "Do you know where I can get some water?"

Said the desert rat: "Nope." "But," ejaculated the c. d., "there isn't any water left in my radiator?"

"What the — do I care if there is or not?" mused the d. r. A CERTAIN desert general store stands as a striking example of the manner in which merchandise should not be displayed. The store looks like the day before a church rummage sale—like a Salvation Army headquarters getting ready to send clothing to a district stricken by an earthquake. It is terrible.

We enter. A not too neat woman meets us. I order a pair of socks. She dives into a veritable wall of merchandise in a futile hunt for black hose.

Hurum Reeve peers around the corner of a counter. He asks Mrs. Kingsley to come and look at some lace.

The not too neat woman spins around and tartly remarks: "You don't want to show her any lace. You want her to see how mused up it is."

"All right," says Hurum, "come around and see how mused up it is."

"People don't understand," says the none too neat woman. "I am all alone here and can't keep things in order."

All that day—and the next—the none too neat woman sat in an easy chair in front of the store. THE desert hotel man is a type. Like the other desert residents he speaks with blunt directness. Said I: "A friend of mine knows a woman up here by the name of Blank. She runs a hotel in the next town. Do you know her?"

"Yep," he replies, "I do. She could tell you some interesting stuff about the old days here—if she would. Sometimes she won't talk much. Sometimes she talks a lot. I ain't seen her much lately. Not long ago she went in for Christian Science and now she don't have so much to do with the rest of us old timers."

A VISITOR in the Saturday night dance hall makes a suggestive remark in front of a gathering of ladies. A stalwart young miner shoves him through the door. Some minutes later the young miner saunters out for a breath of air.

Shortly thereafter the stout young miner returns to the dance hall. He has nothing to say. Somebody notices a spot of blood on his hand. "How come?"

"Oh, that bird I put out of the hall was laying for me outside. I had to lay him out."

"How many times did you hit him?"

The young miner grinned. "Once," he said.

Hangings are not popular now—but justice is still swift in the desert.

THERE are lots of things to write about these days—the European-South American rumpus in the League of Nations—state politics—local politics—national politics—the Colorado river project—escapes at the county jail—many others.

But Spring is in the air. Wildflowers are blooming in the vacant lots we cross as we walk to and from our work. Many things seem unimportant after your eyes have swept far horizons jagged with plum-colored hills. More than that, the linotype operator needs copy—and impressions, glimpses, are more easy to write than opinions. So bear yet awhile—for Spring will soon be gone.
