Adopted Child I have been reading your articles bout giving up your own children. ( was given up when I was nine, when my parents separated, and I um very happy. Min very happy. My parents paid no attention to is (here were six children) except when we could be of use or anuse-ment to them. They went out a great deal, and the children were left with high school girls, some of which were not very elevating. I nust say. The lady that took me taught me nany invaluable things. When I

Twenty-Seven Cent Investment The boys mother died last year and his father is slow and easy-going. Now the boy is smoking, swearing and drinking. He has the car any time he wants it and it is usually ather midnight before he says, "Im not going to be a sissy." —Anxious Mother.
ANSWER.—Yes, I suppose it is terrible to be a "sissy," but it is a great deal worse to be a plain fool.
I put a lot of blame on the father who not only gives the boy the car but helps him push it and its occupant to destruction. An in-twenty-five cents for a padlock for the garage door and a two cent stamped envelope notifying the principal that the boy has with-drawn from school.
