During his sky sens of employment, he set an example of honesty and service that every retail greeer of today can follow with great benefit. At one time he walked several miles after he had closed the store in the evening, to repay a woman customer some tea, which he had weighed incorrectly in a sale during the day. Abraham Lincoin knew the value of Good Will in both his business and political life. Some prominent writer has hald Lincoin this high compli- ment: "He came from the plain people; he was honest, fearless, God rearing, kind, patient, G-loving, patientic and loyal to her-country."
