

Playhouse Shows
"The Second Year"

Especially engaged for the pre-holiday season "The Second Year," a new comedy by Fred Kennedy Myton, will have its Los Angeles premiere at the Hollywood Playhouse Friday, November 25.

The cast for the production is expected by theatre officials to command considerable attention from the public because it brings back to the legitimate stage two stars who deserted to motion pictures several years ago.

Theodore Von Eltz, well known leading man of the screen, and Enid Markey, former stage luminary, vaudeville headliner, and picture star, head the cast.

"The Second Year" will be produced on the same lavish scale of preceding plays at the Hollywood Play House, according to the management. In spite of the additional expense required in obtaining the two stars, the usual low scale of prices will prevail, even for the opening night.

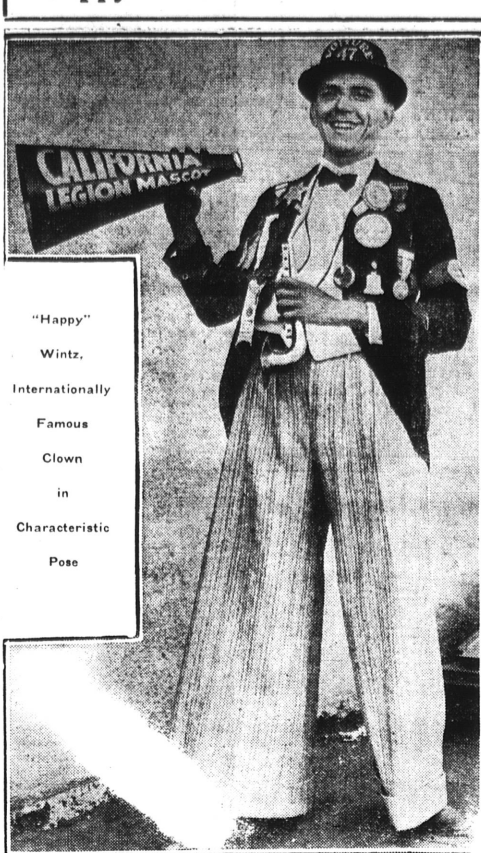

"Meet the Wife," the current production at the Hollywood Play House, will have its final matinee and night showings Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, November 24.

LOCAL NOTES

Miss Marion Crittenden of George street will spend Thanksgiving with Miss Marion Brucher of Los Angeles.

Guests at the J. H. Splittstoesser home for Thanksgiving dinner will include Mr. and Mrs. William Splittstoesser and Mrs. A. D. Splittstoesser of Van Nuys.

Happy Wintz Will Do His Stuff

"Happy" Wintz, internationally famous clown, will appear at the American Legion, 19th District Ball, as Master of Ceremonies.

"Happy" is a prominent Legionaire, being the clown of the national department and mascot of the state department. He was formerly with Ringling Brothers' circus and is well known to most of the baseball fans having appeared in most of the ball parks. To those who have not seen him, you should make a special effort to see him in action at the 19th District Ball in the Rubaiyat Persian Ballroom in Huntington Park on the evening of Monday, November 28th. "Happy" will lead the parade down Pacific boulevard at eight o'clock. In the parade will be three bands, seven or more drum and bugle corps, about a thousand Legionnaires and members of the Legion Auxiliary, also a number of Legion stunts for which they are famous as well as some of the state and national officials. They will march to the Rubaiyat where the dance music will be by the George Redmond's Recording Orchestra. Entertainment will be furnished by some of the leading theatres in Los Angeles. Those who care to listen in may hear the program broadcast from radio station KMIC from ten until twelve o'clock.

Norma Talmadge Film Is Booked at the Torrance

Will Show Thanksgiving-Duncan Sisters Picture Sunday and Monday

Norma Talmadge in the title role of her unique, modern version of "Camille," the famous romance of Alexandre Dumas the younger is the treat in store for the patrons of the Torrance theatre, Thanksgiving Day.

The story of the screen, "Camille," while following closely the theme and spirit of the classical romance, is visualized in settings of the present day. The "Lady of the Camellias," most celebrated of all the Parisian demi-mondaines, is interpreted by Miss Talmadge as a captivating, brilliantly groomed, bobbed haired heartbreaker of the present generation.

Desiring to make "Camille" one of the outstanding triumphs in Norma's career, Joseph M. Schenck, who produced the picture for First National release, recruited a notable cast for the modern picturization of the Dumas classic, and assigned Fred Niblo as director.

BUYING FOR VITAMIN A

Vitamin A is needful for all members of the family from babe to grandfather, and must be liberally supplied in the daily diet. It is not difficult to find, although it may take careful figuring to include it for every family member on a limited food budget.

Milk is one of the cheapest and most adequate food sources of vitamin A, regardless of the size of the budget. Vitamin A is found in the butter fat of the whole milk. Skimmed milk is not adequate for children. As the food money increases, butter, eggs and cheese should be added in generous amounts for vitamin A. Low cost diets must of necessity include butter substitutes. More than ordinary care must be exercised to give children their butter fat in the whole milk. Liver is exceptionally high in vitamin A and beef liver is a cheap source. Cod liver oil is the richest source of this important vitamin.

If a family owns a garden the animal sources of vitamin A can most economically be supplemented with vegetables containing vitamin A. Spinach, carrots, cabbage, lettuce, tomatoes (canned and fresh) are good sources. The green leaves of the cabbage and lettuce are far richer in vitamin A than the bleached one.

"Won't drink milk, butter's fattening, don't like spinach" attitudes must be overcome if a family is to be "vitamin fed." On the supply of vitamins taken into the system depends greatly the vitality of each member of the family.

Children must have vitamin A to grow healthfully and keep up body resistance against infectious disease, especially of the lungs and throat. Vitamin A starvation can cause eye infections; growing boys and girls need vitamin A to help prepare a strong body for capable maturity; the parents need it to retain their health and strength and ward off old age and the grandparents to enjoy a " hale and hearty" ripe old age.

"Thru the 'seven ages' of man, vitamin A is essential to produce a normal life cycle, assure a prolonged maturity and healthful old age.—Christmas Seal Service.

"Always hungry" is natural for a boy in his teens. He eats far more than his father, which is logical. His needs are greater. He must eat for the great growth strides he is making; his activities and his body up-keep. Often he grows tall so rapidly that his muscles do not develop properly and there is little fat to cover his bones. He must eat enough of a well balanced diet to grow a skeleton, muscles and fat.

The big problem of the youth is to get enough to eat. His requirements for an adequate diet have not changed since he was a small boy, except larger amounts of some foods. He still needs a quart of milk daily; eggs several times a week, meat about once a day; vegetables two, besides potato desirable, a liberal amount of fruit and bread and butter. The high colored foods must be eaten freely. The boy needs from 2800 to 4000 calories daily. He can hardly get his quota of calories from liquid foods and green vegetables alone, despite their necessity in the diet. For calories, add such foods as cottage cheese, butter, jams and honey; dried fruits in cereals and puddings, and peanut butter in sandwiches. Cheese and macaroni add many calories; and with milk in the latter dish another building food is added.

Hot breads of all kinds, especially griddle cakes and waffles, should be the rare exceptions and not the rule for growing boys, and even adults. Such food is thought to tax digestion. The boy is apt to overeat at one time because food tastes so good at this age. Overstraining of stomach muscles in youth can be the cause of adult digestive troubles. A sandwich and

Clancy's Kosher Wedding Booked at the Lomita

Irish-Jewish Comedy Film Will Be Shown Sunday and Monday

Can the Jews outwit the Irish or the Irish outfight the Jews? This age old paradox is the question settled by George Sidney in his latest screen comedy for FBO, "Clancy's Kosher Wedding," which will be shown at the Lomita theatre on Sunday and Monday.

As "Hymen Cohen," proprietor of a small clothing store on the east side of New York, Sidney struggles to outwit his next door neighbor and rival in business, "Timothy Clancy," played by Will Armstrong. Matters are further complicated by the love of young Tom Clancy for beautiful Leah Cohen.

A prize-fight between Tom Clancy and Izzy Murphy for the hand of Leah and the financial difficulties that arise from the betting by the Clancys and the Cohens settle the relative merits of the sons of Abraham and St. Patrick.

In his portrayal of Cohen, Sidney is said to have given the best characterization of his long career on stage and screen, while Armstrong has received high praise from many critics for his rendition of the "fightin' Irishman."

Others of the cast of "Clancy's Kosher Wedding," directed by A. E. Gillstrom, include Ann Brody, Mary Gordon, Sharon Lynn, Rex Lease, Ed Brady and Jesse Devorska.

For Thanksgiving Day and Friday the Lomita theatre will show "The Silent Avenger," a comedy and news reel.

On Saturday comes "The Last Alarm," "The Banana King" and "Felix the Cat."

Next Tuesday and Wednesday the great fire picture, "Hook and Ladder, No. 9." Other features will be "The Riding Whirlwind" and a comedy, "The Dizzy Dancer."

On Saturday afternoon the lad who may eat too much at regular meal time to assure his full food requirements. Coffee and tea should be omitted and cocoa or chocolate with milk used instead. It costs money to feed a growing boy to sturdy manhood. Economy in food should be exercised in the non-essential diet luxuries of adults and not in the necessities of an adequate diet for the boy.—Christmas Seal Service.
