Twice a War Veteran Gets Movie Command

Lewis Stone, who plays the role of a French Colonial colonel in Universal's "The Foreign Legion," which will be shown at the Torrance theatre on Sunday and Monday, is well fitted by experience for that role. He is a veteran of two wars and has considerable reputation as an infantry instructor and disciplinarian.

He was born in Worcester, Mass. He attended Barnard school in New York and then enlisted for the Spanish-American war. Afterwards he went on the stage and then on the screen. He enlisted again when the World War broke out and attained the rank of major, which rank he still holds in the Officers Reserve Corps. This military training has given him a bearing which he finds invaluable in his picture work.

Others in the cast of this picture are Norman Kerry, who co-stars with him; Mary Nolan, June Marlowe, Crawford Kent and Walter Perry.

Edward Sloman directed this from the story, "The Red Mirage," by I. A. R. Wylie.
