A THATCHED ROOF COTTAGE

By R. C. HUNTER & BRO., Architects, New York
The roof lines are the distinctive feature of this house. The soft rolling eaves, brought low near the ground certainly give a cozy, home-like effect. The roofs are covered with shingles, which can be obtained already bent to conform to the curves and rolls as in this picture, and stained to match weathered straw, or a dark brown shade would look exceptionally well. A roof of this type when laid, is a very good imitation of the old thatched straw roofs of England and France. Note the graceful curves above the entrance door and group of windows in the living porch. The side walls are covered with wide siding painted white; all shutters are sky blue. The plan arrangement of this house is very good. On the first floor one finds a nice big Living room, a good sized dining room, a fine enclosed living porch and a conveniently arranged kitchen. The tea box is located in the rear entry. The stairs lead to the second floor from the living room and kitchen. A large closet is located on the landing. The second floor shows three good bed rooms and a bath. There is also a good sized wardrobe off one of the bed rooms. The laundry, heater and coal storage rooms are located in the cellar. This house would look well even in a community where its neighbors were much larger and more pretentious, and would make a home that one would be proud to own. Cost about $6400. Complete working plans and specifications of this house may be obtained for a nominal sum from the Building Editor. Refer to House A-100.

Radio Perpetuated In World's Largest Plant

This interesting photograph was taken just at the moment when a Screen-Grid radio, the latest receiving set produced at the Atwater Kent factory, was being placed into a stone container during dedicatory services of the world's biggest plant at Philadelphia. Mayor Mackey, extreme left, A. Atwater Kent and Senator C. C. Dill, head of the radio commission, are in the foreground. The exercises were attended by Ray Thomas, Atwater Kent distributor.
