Rancher Accidentally Killed When Run Down by Local Pilot

The first man to be run down and fatally injured by an airplane was struck by a plane piloted by R. S. Flaherty, of this city, who was unable to prevent the tragic accident, according to reports received here. The victim was J. D. Livingston, 34-year-old Morongo Valley rancher and personal friend of Flaherty.

Mr. and Mrs. Flaherty and Jack Jensen, an automobile salesman, had left a nearby landing field Saturday to visit friends in the Morongo Valley near Livingston's ranch. Livingston heard the plane circling over his house during the evening and ran out with a lantern to assist the local pilot, who was known to him, in landing on the only level ground in the vicinity.

Plane Turns Over

Flaherty saw the light and guided the descending plane toward it. But just as the plane was about to land, it turned over and the semi-darkness toward him. Livingston evidently became confused and thought the pilot was misjudging his direction, for he turned and ran, but his flight took him directly into the path of the landing plane, which crashed into the Torrance airman to sweep out of his way. Livingston was struck by the lower wing of the plane, which was taxiing along the ground at a high rate of speed, according to the reports.

The impact and Flaherty's frantic effort to avoid hitting his friend, turned the plane over on its back but the pilot and his wife were only slightly injured while Jensen was unscathed. They saw, however, that Livingston had been badly injured and they placed him in his automobile and rushed him 30 miles to Hanning, where he died in a hospital three hours later.

An inquest was held Monday morning and Livingston's death was declared by a coroner's jury to have been the result of an unavoidable accident. Testimony disclosed that he became excited and ran in front of the plane as it neared the ground.

Fashions for Men Show Color Vital

tell you that French nude, parchment, rachel, moderne, walnut, mid, cinabar, turt tan, a Melba (peach tone with a mauve cast) should be popular this year among men who know their tедies.

High school boys are expected to wear baggy trousers, preferably the soiled-corduroy variety, loose or no neckties, no hats and fallen socks. It is reported from authentic sources here. Father will wear short knickers for sports wear, while son will affect long, full length trousers. Rust brown and blue are the prevailing colors for the shoulder dinner jackets or "Tuxedos" for those who "dress for dinner."

Epworth League To Go To Inglewood

The Torrance Epworth League of the First Methodist church will attend the quarterly banquet and rally to be held October 24 at Inglewood First Methodist church. The League desired to win the banner for the largest attendance. Any young people desirous of enjoying a banquet and a good time should send their names to Harry Phillips, 2023 Andros avenue, phone 274, or Dick Sinclair, 1521 El Prado, phone 571-AV, before Monday, October 20. They will then be guests of the League at the banquet without charge.

TO BUILD HOME

Marie B. Kendall, of Long Beach, will build a seven-room frame and stucco house at 279 Via Linda Vista in the Hollywood Riviera to cost about $6000, according to City Engineer Frank Leonard, who issued the building permit this week.

New Chevrolet Sales Chief Is Pioneer Dealer

P. F. Minnock, one of the real veterans of the American motor industry, with a record of 32 years of service in the automotive trade, was welcomed by the Chevrolet sales organization of Southern California last week as their new chief. Minnock is the new zone sales manager for Chevrolet in Southern California.

CHEVROLET CHIEF

Starting with the company which manufactured the Orient car in Waltham, Mass., in 1897, Minnock has perhaps today the longest record of experience of any motor car executive in the United States. Nor is he any stranger in Los Angeles, for 30 years ago he sold "horseless carriages" here for the A. R. Mains Manufacturing Company.

The last time Minnock came to Los Angeles, he came here to retire. He had just resigned from a high executive position with a motor company he had served for twenty years. But in Los Angeles he met R. H. Grant, then general sales manager for Chevrolet, who was here conducting the annual spring meeting of dealers, and Grant lost no time in convincing him that he should be working for Chevrolet.

SCOUTS ON TRIP

Lomita scouts and Torrance scouts in troops No. 3 and 4 enjoyed a week-end trip to the Griffith Park scout camp last week. The boys did all their own cooking and camp making under the direction of an official scout leader at the camp. They were taken to the park in a truck.

Hugh Crawford, Popular Judge, Opens Campaign

Voters Are Warned Against Confusion In Regard To His Opponent

Scores of men and women throughout Los Angeles county, who are advocating the re-election of Superior Court Judge Hugh J. Crawford to Office Number Eight at the November final election, are united in their praise of the splendid record made by Judge Crawford while serving the past six years on the Superior Court bench.

Judge Hugh J. Crawford has had a colorful career, practicing as an attorney in Los Angeles county for thirty-seven years, followed by nine years on the Municipal Court bench and the past six years as Judge of the Superior Court. His common sense handling of justice, marked by his intelligence, knowledge of law, humanity and desire to make his court a court of square dealing, has earned for him the title of "The Golden Rule Judge" and has achieved for him a large following of friends.

While a judge on the Municipal bench, it is cited that Judge Crawford inaugurated the installment plan of paying traffic fines, thus relieving the hardships and sufferings of families of working men who were without cash to pay their fines and who were forced to accept jail sentences.

Names Are Confusing

Supporters of Judge Hugh J. Crawford urge his re-election on the platform of "his record" and voters are cautioned to remember that Judge Crawford is the incumbent candidate. According to a statement made today at the campaign headquarters, a mix up in the identity of candidates seems to follow Judge Crawford's political fortunes. Six years ago, when he was elected to the Superior Court, another name of Crawford, appeared on the ballot alongside that of Judge Hugh J. Crawford, many voters becoming confused as to which one was the judge.

It is stated that voters are confused in the coming election because Judge Crawford's opponent, Dudley S. Valentine, bears the same last name as former Superior Court Judge L. H. Valentine and the present Superior Court Judge Frederick C. Valentine. Many people have confused the name of Judge Crawford's opponent with these two well known jurists. The fact of the matter is, it is pointed out, that the Valentine appearing on the November ballot has never been elected to the Superior Court and is not related to or endorsed by either of these judges of the same last name.

Judge Hugh J. Crawford's committee stresses that his firmness with habitual criminals, and his common sense decisions with minor first offenders, shows his to be the proper temperament for re-election to the post he has filled so well. Judge Crawford is a member of the Masons, Odd Fellows, Moose, Elks and Knight of Pythias, and the Episcopal church.

The Contagion of the Dress-up
Idea Extends to Suits

By FRANCES PAGET

Copyright, 1930, by Style Sources
NEW YORK (U.P.)—Through the early collections presented for fall in this country, and reflected in the opening groups of Paris fall and winter fashions, there has been limited but insistent reference to the costume suit or afternoon suit. It represents one of the gradual influences away from the old ensemble idea of frock and coat in the formal costume and is another evidence of the strong hold the jacket feature has taken.

In a season when the emphasis is on the richer types of costumes there is strong chance of recognizing the dress suit as a type which may be taken up by the ultra smart woman, as one which will accent the trim lines of her figure and one which has a youthful quality. The suit with the little jacket entirely of fur, which promises to be a smart favorite this season, is a phase of the costume suit style and will help to establish the fall and winter suit idea in mind. The Russian influence recognized by French creators and promoted by certain shops here also is in favor of the hip-length jacket suit.

Velvets, the Lyon or the transparent, or even velveteen, when trimmed expressively with fur gives the suit a formal aspect. Fine broadcloths and some velvety woollens may also qualify in the class, while lustrous satins and conservative patterned laces in blouses are further assets.

Hanson Finishes Sale of Tract

Inglewood Man Building Two Homes Here

Fred Hanson, real estate broker of this city, has completed the sale of 15 lots of Tract 1983, near 215th street and Denker avenue to A. J. Driscoll, formerly a builder and real estate broker of Inglewood. The lots were the last of a 45-lot tract owned by George M. Case and represent the sale of the entire property by Hanson.

Driscoll has begun construction of two five-room homes to be completed in 60 days on the tract. Hanson stated that he had secured two loans for the construction of the homes and does not contemplate any difficulty in securing other loans if needed. The builder, Driscoll, intends placing the houses on the market at a low price to meet the present conditions, Hanson said.
