Paris Styles

By MARY KNIGHT
United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS (U.P.)—Just the other day we hinted that Paris was pretty definitely "in print" for the summer, and now along comes Jean Charles Worth to nip us in the bud by denying it.

"No more prints," he declares, "we have had so much of them that the prettiest designs have ceased to please us, and one longs for the harmonious combination of plain, beautiful fabrics on which to rest one's eyes."

We stick by our guns, however, because it will be a fairly long and hot spell before the prints already out can be withdrawn from circulation. Of course, Worth, as do all big dressmakers over here, speaks in the future tense about practically all his fashions because he has to think so far ahead. By the time just ordinary folks had caught up to him and can afford to buy what he advocated two or three months ago, he's full of new ideas and your "present" wardrobe is a "dead past" to him. Life is grim.

Even Worth couldn't very well deny that prints are all over the place at this actual moment so you can take his denial of our fine truth to mean that there won't be any prints in his winter collection which you'll know about early in August. Until then, go ahead with your prints and be as happy as a girl knowing you have more company than you count!
