Ted Lewis and His Band At Torrance Tonight

A battered silk "topper" is the only thing high-hat about the latest great personality to come to the screen—Ted Lewis. Lewis, who, with his band, provides mirth and melody in "Here Comes the Band," his Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle coming tonight, Friday and Saturday to the Torrance Theatre, has tipped his famous hat to stage audiences for many years.

It is indelibly connected with his famous songs; with his clarinet; with "When My Baby Smiles At Me," "Peanuts," "Me and My Shadow" and others, which he plays and sings among his specialties in the new picture.

Often his fans have asked about the origin of the battered headpiece. He has received thousands of fan letters about it. It's one of the first questions he was asked when he arrived in Hollywood.

Ted, whose music and antics have won him the sobriquet, "High-hatted Tragedian of Song," says that the hat dates back to an engagement at the famous Rector's in New York.

"Broadway Melody of 1936" Opens Sunday At Plaza

In "Broadway Melody of 1936," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's most ambitious musical yet to be filmed, Robert Taylor, Buddy Ebsen, Vilma Ebsen and Eleanor Powell seal their friendship forever as shown in the above scene. The picture opens Sunday, November 17, at the Plaza Theatre, Hawthorne.

Six months of extensive preparation, including weeks of dance rehearsals, lengthy research for magic sets, designing of dresses and gowns by Adrian, a complete Broadway dress rehearsal for the penthouse number and four months of filming was necessary at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios for their most ambitious musical, "Broadway Melody of 1936," which opens Sunday, November 17, at the Plaza Theatre, Hawthorne.

The modernized Manhattan penthouse, the setting for one of the five elaborate dance ensembles, is the largest ever built at that studio for a single musical sequence.

Controlled By Springs
 The furniture for the scene was controlled by springs and operated by a board similar in many respects to a piano. A slight touch on one of the keys caused a grand piano to rise to the level of the floor within five seconds. Other keys brought the same results with tables, chairs, fountains and lounges. By reversing the pressure of the keys the floor could be bared in a flash.

Stage talent from Broadway, the toasts of Continental capitals, radio sensations from coast-to-coast chains and screen luminaries from Hollywood have been merged to form the all-star cast headed by Jack Benny and including Una Merkel, Sid Silvers, June Knight, Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, Frances Langford, Nick Long Jr., Vilma and Buddy Ebsen, Harry Stockwell, Shirley Ross and Robert Wildhack.

Songs By Brown and Freed
 Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed, famous for their song hits in the first "Melody" and other musicals, have written five special numbers for the John W. Considine, Jr., production, which includes "I've Got a Feelin' You're Foolin'," "On a Sunday Afternoon," "Broadway Rhythm," "You Are My Lucky Star" and "Sing Before Breakfast."

Dave Gould, creator of last year's dance sensations, "The Continental" and "The Carioca," has surpassed himself with his new "Melody" dance routines and ensembles, according to those who viewed the production.

Roy Del Ruth, considered by critics to be Hollywood's ace musical megaphonist, directed the M-G-M musical.

A romance involving pretty Lorna McLure (June Lang), a Scotch lassie, and Alan Douglas (William Janney), a barrister's clerk, is woven through the story. Among others in a really notable supporting cast are Anne Grey, Vernon Steele, Jimmy Finlayson, David Torrence, Maurice Black, Daphne Pollard, Mary Gordon and Lionel Belmore.

"Bonnie Scotland," unquestionably one of the most entertaining full-length productions in which Laurel and Hardy have yet appeared, comes to the Torrance Theatre for a two days engagement commencing next Sunday.

Comedy Team In Fun Picture At Plaza

Rose petals in the pathway of Laurel and Hardy, the unequalled pair of screen comedians! For nearly ten years under the banner of Hal Roach, the duo has delighted screen fans throughout the world with their inimitable antics. In their latest full-length feature comedy, "Bonnie Scotland," which opens Friday, November 15, at the Plaza Theatre, Hawthorne, the comic couple romps through a tale of adventure and intrigue in Scotland and India, leaving in its path a trail of merriment and hilarity.

They Are Sent to India
 The opening scenes show the pair in Scotland. Stanley Mc-Laurel, accompanied by his pompous friend, Oliver Hardy, has arrived in Scotland to claim the magnificent estate of his deceased uncle. So far as Stan is concerned, however, the estate consists of some valueless heirlooms for that is his share of the legacy. Then the boys, through a misadventure, find they have signed themselves in to the Scottish Highlanders. They are sent to India in His Majesty's Service. There they are called upon to impersonate two commanding officers in an effort to save the fort. As in all good stories, their ruse is effective but not until after they have experienced some hazardous adventures.

It is perhaps needless to state that Messrs. Laurel and Hardy are as uproarious in their antics as ever in this comedy classic. With unusual finesse and bravado they swagger through sequence after sequence. Attired in the habiliment of Scotch Highlanders, the boys present hilarious caricatures of "the ladies from hell" and once again top the heights of the art of pantomime.
