WE DRIVERS

A Series of Brief Discussions on Driving, Devoted to the Safety, Comfort and Pleasure of the Motoring Public. Prepared by General Motors

No. 5—DRIVING ON HILLS

In some parts of the country hills are taken for granted... and good steep ones, too. But for some of us who live in flatter country, hill driving is not so familiar.

As a matter of fact, there are several conditions peculiar to driving in very steep hills or mountains, especially if the altitude is high. For instance, a car that develops 100 horsepower at sea-level, has only 82 horsepower at an altitude of 5000 feet, and only 60 horsepower on top of Pike's Peak.

Another thing is that sometimes grades are deceptive and we don't realize how steep they are, if there is no level ground to judge by. So if we go on a road trip and happen to get into country where hills are hills, we often have no idea of what is in store for us. Like as not, we will come rolling up to a hill, taking it for granted that we'll make the grade. But before we've gone very far we find that our power seems to be giving out, and we're slowing down. Then we realize we must shift to second gear, but we're lucky if we haven't found out too late that there are, stalled on a hill!

Now people who drive on hills all the time say one thing to remember is that there's nothing like a good start. Of course, this is true, because the minute we start up, gravity starts to work and work fast. Yard-by-yard it uses up our momentum till by and-by that momentum is just about gone. Then we have to shift to a lower gear to increase our power. Experts tell us that by far the most common fault in hill-climbing is failure to shift to lower gear soon enough. So just to be sure, some drivers set a definite point at which to change gears. The consensus of opinion seems to be that we should always go into second gear as soon as our speed gets down to 20 miles an hour.

There are times, however, when we want to stop on a hill. So it's important to know how to start again, with our car on an upgrade. And there seem to be two methods used by experienced drivers.

Some use their foot brake to keep their cars from rolling backward, put their engine in low gear and accelerate slowly with the hand throttle, gradually engaging their clutch and releasing the brake at the same time. Other good drivers do exactly the same thing, only they use the hand brake and the foot accelerator. But both groups tell us it doesn't make much difference... to use whichever method we happen to like the better.

Now there aren't many hills that cars can't climb nowadays... and what goes up must come down. And that's where we have to look out for momentum. He may have been a friend in need when we were coming up hill, but going down he'll run away with us if we aren't careful. And if there are any sharp curves or any bad bumps or loose gravel, we have to be careful or he'll pitch us right off the road.

Many drivers say that we should go down a hill in the same gear we would use to get up. In other words, if it's steep enough so we would have to go up in second or even low gear, then we'd better get into that same gear before we start down. If our car is in second or low gear, our engine works as a very effective brake, and besides it saves a lot of wear on our real brakes.

Speaking of gears, experienced drivers say we should never, under any condition, disengage our clutch and coast down hill. That's just what momentum is waiting for. Just give momentum a free rein, without our engine to check it, and nobody can tell what's going to happen.

When we do get in country where people are used to driving on hills all the time, it may seem to us that they take those hills without the slightest concern. But if we were in their cars with them and could watch them closely, we would see that they take all these precautions we have mentioned, just as a matter of habit. And one thing is sure. They make it a rule never to pass other cars on hills, or get on the wrong side of the road, when they can't see far enough ahead to be sure whether anyone's coming.

Screen Epic At Methodist Church Sunday

Picture Play Starring William Farnum Portrays World Events

Timely and spectacular is the Edwin Carewe screen epic, "Are We Civilized?" which comes to the First Methodist church December 15.

Starring William Farnum and Anita Louise, supported by an all-star cast and more than 25,000 atmospheric players, "Are We Civilized?" rips the veil off present-day world events, and packs the greatest message for peace, tolerance and good-will ever filmed.

Raising the curtain on the past, through the ages, and revealing the present, in the light of the current world crisis, and the new threats of worldwide war, the Carewe film delivers a crushing blow to the forces of greed and conquest.

The picture was personally directed by Edwin Carewe, head of the new movement for production and distribution of instructional film entertainment to schools, churches, clubs and civic organizations throughout the world.

In connection with the local showing of "Are We Civilized?" there will be shown two reels of interesting short subjects.

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

The words of the Psalmist, "The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore," constitute the Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon on "God the Preserver of Man" on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Lesson-Sermon presents these Scriptural selections from Mark about Jesus: "And they went into Capernaum; and straightway on the sabbath day he entered into the synagogue, and taught... And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John. But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever, and anon they tell him of her. And he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them." Among the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, are the statements: "Truth is God's remedy for error of every kind, and Truth destroys only what is untrue. Hence the fact that, to-day, as yesterday, Christ casts out evils and heals the sick."

Citizens of Redondo are voting today on a proposed bond issue of $300,000 to provide funds for construction of a yacht harbor, supplementing a requested federal grant.
