A proposal to house seven county engineering departments in a new seven-story engineering building to be erected at a cost of $931,000 on county-owned land was being considered today by members of the board of supervisors.

Plans and specifications for the building have been submitted to the supervisors by Roscoe E. Shoner, chief mechanical engineer for the county. It is proposed to house the mechanical department, county surveyor, road department, flood control department, regional planning department, sanitation districts offices, and janitor department in the building.

Shoner suggested that the building be located on the west side of Spring street about 200 feet south of Sunset boulevard in Los Angeles on property owned by the county. Erection of the building would effect an annual saving in rental of $82,105, which the county is now paying to house the seven departments.

The building would be of modern design and conform to the architecture of other buildings to be constructed in the civic center.

Vocational training for unemployed boys and girls of Los Angeles county may legally be given them at county expense if they are without funds and are not supported by relatives or friends, according to a ruling on file today with the board of supervisors from County Counsel Everett W. Mattoon.

Mattoon ruled that persons under 18 years of age having no means of support may be supported by the county while they are being given vocational training.

The board of supervisors had asked Mattoon to prepare a county ordinance which would allow a program of rehabilitation for unemployed young persons. Under Mattoon's opinion this program may be launched under the present law without an additional ordinance.

The county council stated that youngsters could be supported and trained just as legally as the county now aids adult charity clients thru the rehabilitation division of the department of charities.

A young person receiving such training and support would be required to qualify as an "indigent and be a lawful resident of the county."

At the request of Robert H. Key, president of the Los Angeles county board of education, plans for the observance of Constitution day on Thursday of this week were made by all school administrators in the county.

"Law observance is one of the fundamentals of proper living and a growing laxity in that direction is one of the dangers being faced by this county, state and nation," Key said in pledging the support of the county body to assist in the celebration of Constitution day. A day has been set aside for the past few years to recall to the people of the United States the aims and ideals of the constitution upon which this nation was founded.

"In the rush to adopt new methods and subjects in education there has been a tendency to ease off on some of those things which in the past have helped to develop a strong virile citizenship," Key said. "Our board has not only authorized the sending of letters to all school administrators, urging proper recognition of that day, but is planning a study of the curriculum with a view to putting greater emphasis on the study of the constitution in all grades," the board president stated.

torney and former city attorney of Torrance, who is the nominee of the Republican ticket, at the November general election.

Supervisor Contest W. R. Barclay, city engineer of Hawthorne, and who was credited with but 7,516 votes against Supervisor Leland M. Ford's 52,132, also filed a complaint with the Los Angeles county superior court, asking a recount of all ballots cast in the fourth supervisorial district.

Barclay alleges that many ballots were not counted and asks that his name be placed on the November ballot, as he received more votes than any of the other 13 candidates for the post. Supervisor Ford, however, was credited with 52,132 votes, which is several thousand more than the combined total of all 14 of his opponents. The date for the recount is scheduled to be set next Tuesday by the presiding judge's department of the superior court.

A contesting candidate is required to pay expenses of the recount day by day, and in a supervisorial district the cost probably would be high, owing to the large number of precincts, according to county election officials. The time required probably would be fully a week, it was estimated.

Geyer Manager for Colden Lee Geyer's dissatisfaction with the election count is apparently not held by his campaign manager, David Shrader, of Gardena, who has publicly pledged his support to the entire Democratic ticket. Shrader says he will give not only President Roosevelt but Congressman Colden his loyal support.

Mr. Shrader states that he considers the New Deal the paramount issue in the campaign, and anything that might detract from the success of the New Deal would be very harmful to this country. He is, therefore, supporting Congressman Colden, President Roosevelt and the entire Democratic ticket.

Bird Observers Are Wanted

WANTED—More volunteer observers of bird migration in the South and West. Address United States Biological Survey, Washington, D. C.

The Survey reports it has plenty of bird observers east of the Mississippi river and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, but not enough in the South and West. Persons in these two regions interested in becoming bird observers are requested to write Biological Survey. The main qualification is ability to identify birds.

Bird-migration observers serve without pay largely because they find their work a fascinating hobby. Some of them make a game of keeping track of birds and especially in noting the arrival and departure of migratory species. In some areas on important migration routes observers have listed more than 100 species daily. Their reports provide facts that are particularly useful in establishing regulations for hunting waterfowl.
