STRAWS in the Wind

HINT FOR THE HOUSE
Not many of us can afford interior decorators. It's more fun to do things oneself anyway. But so often rooms we plan carefully fall flat and stale. This is because the three primary colors, red, blue and yellow are not all present in some form. A room in peach and green, for instance, will be more interesting if there is an accent of blue in a bowl, or possibly in a mirror. And much of the charm that books lend a room is based on the color variety they introduce in an inconspicuous manner.

HINT FOR GOOD LOOKS
It's not bones or regular features either that make you lovely—it's color! That is why haphazard make-up is never effective. The clever woman is careful to blend her rouge, powder and lipstick to one focal color, just as a painter blends the colors on his palette when he creates a portrait. Nature has given us a focal color in our eyes. Every brown-eyed woman knows that she looks well in orange, for it reflects the glint in her brown eyes. Every blue-eyed woman admits that blue is the most flattering shade she can wear. Makeup should follow suit: warm, orange tints for brown-eyed beauties—cool tones for blue eyes. Think about your eye-color the next time you shop for cosmetics.
