

"Trumpet Blows" Stars George Raft As A Bullfighter

George Raft's second starring picture, "The Trumpet Blows," a story of Mexico and the bull rings, comes on Sunday and Monday, May 6 and 7, to the Plaza Theatre at Hawthorne. It is a Paramount picture, featuring Adolphe Menjou, Frances Drake, Sidney Toler, Edward Ellis, Katherine DeMille and Francis McDonald, and was directed by Stephen Roberts.

George Raft, who has just completed his education in the United States, returns to the home of his brother, a wealthy rancher, in Mexico. From the first, it is evident that they are very fond of each other.

Menjou wants Raft to settle down now, marry and forget all about bull fighting. The younger brother does change his mind when he meets Frances Drake. But later, learning his brother loves the girl too, he returns to his teacher, and makes plans for his return to the world's most dangerous profession.

Injured, he loses his first fight, and his courage goes. He becomes a coward, drinking heavily. However, through a series of unusual incidents embracing the three people, Raft finally redeems his honor, wins his heart's desire and his brother's love, and brings the picture to a thrilling ending.

Constance Cummings Goes Back To Chorus In Absorbing Drama

Constance Cummings studied dancing for ten years, all through her girlhood—and then used her hard-won ability in only two shows, in which she appeared as a chorus girl in New York City.

Following this, she played a role in one dramatic play, but immediately thereafter she succumbed to the lure of the motion picture and Hollywood, where she has resided ever since. She did make one picture recently in England, but Hollywood is "home."

Here the young actress takes full advantage of the possibilities for outdoor activities the year 'round, and spends much of her leisure time in swimming, horse-back riding, and tennis. She confesses that she still fails to qualify as an expert tennis player, but she is taking regular lessons, and looks forward to the day when she can defeat some of the crack players of the film colony.

By coincidence Miss Cummings appears as a chorus girl in the opening sequence of "Glamour," her latest picture, and during the making of these scenes found herself right at home among the fancy-stepping chorines engaged for the film.

"Glamour," produced by Universal with Miss Cummings and Paul Lukas in the featured roles, will

STARS IN COMEDY

W. C. Fields is the lovable but eccentric inventor in Paramount's "You're Telling Me," coming Sunday and Monday, May 6 and 7, to the Torrance Theatre. His burlesque golf scene furnishes some of the many laughs in the picture. Larry Crabbe, Joan Marsh and Adrienne Ames are featured.

At The Avalon Theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 6-7-8

HELD TO ANSWER
Frank Maljo, arrested April 24 in Walteria on a charge of drunk driving, was held to answer to the superior court at a preliminary hearing held in the city police court Tuesday. He was committed to the county jail in default of bail.

be the feature at the Torrance Theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 8 and 9, and tells a dramatic story based on "the eternal triangle." The picture was directed by William Wyler, and the supporting cast includes Phillip Reed (who sings several songs during the progress of the story), Doris Lloyd and Joseph Cawthorn.

Edna May Oliver Plays Aunt March

Frosty old Aunt March, the terror of "Little Women," who can bring the tears as well as the laughs, is played by none other than Edna May Oliver, in RKO-Radio's dramatization of the Louisa M. Alcott volume. Aunt March roars and frets to hide a heart as big as a million dollars, and probably none in Hollywood could bring to the part a greater depth and understanding.

Twenty well-known players have been assembled to enact the principals. No dramatic license whatever has been taken by the studio, the work being held to have been so vital to the lives of so many girls that it is unfolded as a pressed rose from between the old leaves.

Miss Oliver storms around Katharine Hepburn, as Jo; Joan Bennett, as Amy; Frances Dee, as Meg; Jean Parker, as Beth.

Paul Lukas, Douglass Montgomery, Henry Stephenson and Spring Byington are in the cast, with direction by George Cukor.

"Little Women" plays at the Hermosa Theatre, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, on a double feature program with the highly entertaining comedy, "Ever Since Eve," starring George O'Brien.
