Notes From Washington

By Charles J. Colden
Congressman, 17th District

Every day the mails bring a load of propaganda to the desk of the Congressman. As every important bill gets on its way, it arouses the proponents and the opponents. The representatives of various organizations in Washington watch with eagle eyes and at every prospect of influencing the members of Congress, the word is passed down the line until it reaches every local organization throughout the country. Then the letters, cards and wires come rolling in like an avalanche.

The enemies of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill, which is designed to regulate stock exchanges, have exceeded all others in their volume of propaganda.

The program started in the financial district of New York City. It spread to the inland centers like Cleveland, Chicago, later to San Francisco, and finally, to Los Angeles. I have received hundreds of letters from residents of the Seventeenth Congressional District soliciting my opposition to the regulation of the stock exchanges of this country. The tone of the letters and the arguments, for the most part, are identical. That they have been prompted by the same source, is easy to determine. There is a vast difference between the letter written by a constituent expressing his individual opinion and the letter written by the instigation of a Wall Street propagandist. To sift opinions and to distinguish between the genuine and the propagandized hand-me-down expressions is one of the jobs of a Congressman.

It is reported that the New York Stock Exchange ALONE contributed $200,000 to propaganda Congress. Other exchanges are reputed to have given a corresponding quota. Dozens of these exchanges, including Los Angeles, send their agents to Washington to buttonhole Congressmen, to appear before committees and to use their influence in every way to defeat the Fletcher-Rayburn bill which has the backing of the President. The battle of the "stock exchanges" to defeat regulation is more fierce than any that has been raging since the inauguration of President Roosevelt. As is usual in such contests, the special interests that profit by unregulated stock exchanges stir up the propaganda, fill the newspapers with scary and foreboding articles and the public, presumed to be protected by the proposed legislation, rarely says a word.

Congressional offices are not only flooded with telegrams and letters, but a number of the big dailies publish editorials in opposition which are marked and forwarded to the members of Congress. Since, on some days, to read all of this propaganda would consume one's entire time, capsule of it goes into the wastebasket. It is the only way out!

So millions of pieces of propaganda are wasted but the postal department receipts mount and the telegraph companies reap a harvest. I have at times received 50 telegrams a day and I have known Senators to receive as many as 200. The stock exchange propaganda has been badly overdone and has caused some resentment and reaction against the cause it sought to promote.

Many constituents demand to know how a Congressman is going to vote upon a bill, but the wise Congressman is shy in committing himself upon a bill until it reaches the floor and he knows what has happened to it. Time after time he has witnessed the amending of a bill on the floor. Other times the bill is so changed that he changes his opinion of it. Sometimes a weak bill is strengthened and again a good bill's teeth are drawn until it is worthless.

Dr. Pope of the National Old Age Pension Association has a well-organized propaganda program all of his own. Rather he did flave. Now he has been debarred from using the mails and has voluntarily agreed to quit business. The records show that he has been conducting various shady enterprises for a number of years and on various occasions, has been involved with Uncle Sam. His latest campaign was netting him several hundred dollars per day collected from the supporters of old age pensions. Each person paid in one dime for a membership and this scheme reached such proportions that the shrewd doctor resped a harvest.

One of his agents approached me and offered to broadcast my speech over a national radio hook-up and to carry half-page advertisements in some of the Los Angeles papers. Some of the members of Congress accepted the doctor's alluring invitations, not being advised as to his clever deceptions. Every time a Congressman tent his name and made a speech for old age pensions, the public was led to believe that Dr. Pope was a man of high standing since he was supported by prominent men in public life. The old age pension program has much to commend it. Several bills to promote the idea have been introduced into Congress but, for the time, Dr. Pope and his ill-advised methods have given it a set-back. So, in many instances, propaganda

Junior Artisans Sponsor Program Monday Evening

Junior Artisans, of the Lomita lodge, presented a very entertaining program at the regular meeting of the United Artisans held Monday night. All but one of the numbers were given by the juniors. Men of the lodge put on a highly humorous play, the "Womanless Wedding," done in blackface, in which all the characters were taken by staid citizens and their antics and Negro dialect proved to be side-splittingly funny for the audience.

Other numbers on the program were a song by the assembly; Richard Woods, tap dance; skit by nie Sharock in tap dance and waltz clog; Grace Shackelford and officers of the junior lodge in Hawaiian song and dance; Emma Farquhar, tap dance; Florence Kendrick of the Meglin Kiddie studio, accompanied the dancers on the piano.

Following the program, an orchestra played for dancing. A feature of this part of the entertainment was the prize waltz. Judges were forced to call the contest a draw, and awarded prizes to Walt Morris and Mary Jorgenson, exponents of the older type of waltzing, and to Art Shackelford and Ellen Farquhar who demonstrated the modern style.

Lomita Resident Asks Jury Trial In Poison Case

James D. O'Quinn, 2164 245th street, Lomita, was arraigned in the Lomita township justice court on April 27, to answer to a charge of exposing poisonous substances for the purpose of destroying animals. O'Quinn plead not guilty and asked for a jury trial which will be held on May 8. H. R. Higgins, of Lomita, whose dog was one of the eight to die of poison within two days, was the complaining witness, with an officer of the humane department making the investigation.

Ball was fixed at $250, a surety bond in that amount was filed and O'Quinn was released.
