Lakewood Village Offers Garden Homes For Workers

Capacity attendance has been on hand each day at the model home, Honeymoon Cottage, located at Lakewood Village, the new garden home community being developed by Charles B. Hopper just north of Long Beach. This house has been completely furnished in the new nautical and tempo style.

Designed to provide garden homes for those working in industrial plants and business areas within a ten-mile radius of Lakewood Village, the new homesite project sponsored by Charles B. Hopper, general sales agent and veteran subdivider and developer, this modern real estate development has attracted unprecedented attention because of the demand for property and the active building now going on.

Practically all of the $1,000,000 which has been invested in Lakewood Village in homes, educational development which includes the $500,000 Long Beach Junior College and general improvement has been expended since January first of this year. Barron fields have been transformed into tree-lined streets, public utilities installed and the whole completion of the area has been changed into a bustling, colorful village.

Twenty-eight homes are already completed in the first unit and with the opening of the second unit but two weeks ago, sales in this new 100-acre unit have exceeded all expectation, the developers report.

Lakewood Village is located just north of Long Beach and just east of the beautiful Lakewood Country Club. It has been laid out so that residents could buy or build a city home on spacious lots and enjoy the garden privileges of a country home.
