Tires Withstand Accidents That Demolish Cars

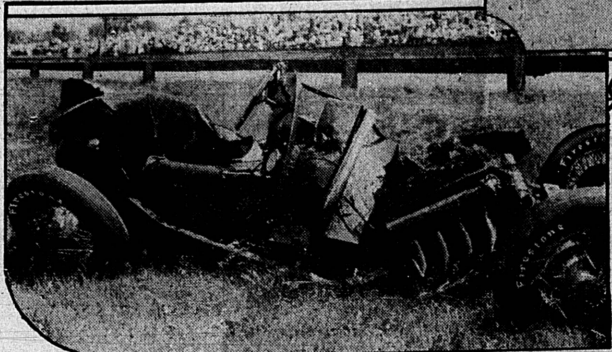

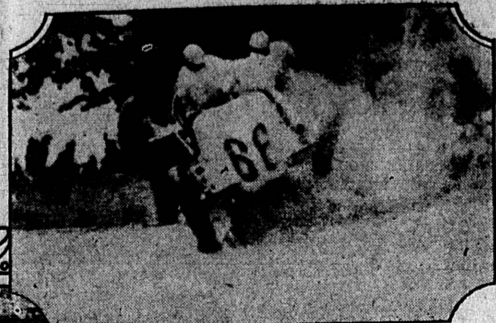

What happens when racing motor cars traveling 100 miles an hour get out of control is shown by the accompanying pictures taken at the Indianapolis Speedway. They also demonstrate how helpless even the most expert drivers are under such conditions, particularly the illustration at the right, which shows Al Gordon, one of the world's best racing pilots, climbing over a concrete retaining wall.

These racing cars weigh approximately 3,000 pounds. When they hit a solid wall, two and one half feet high, at a speed of almost two miles a minute the impact is terrific.

Inspection of these accidents brought out one fact of particular interest to the average motorist—that was the performance of the tires. Though the chassis were wrecked, the tires were found fully inflated and undamaged.

Racing officials and drivers at Indianapolis cited this particular tire performance as a "concrete" demonstration of the value of speed contests in developing better automotive equipment for general use. For many years, Firestone engineers have been designing and building tires that would withstand ever increasing speeds and punishment. That race drivers, who choose their tires with unusual care and buy them outright, appreciate these efforts is shown by the fact that practically all entrants in the Indianapolis and other important speed events for more than a decade have used Firestones exclusively.

JULY SALES refrigerators NEAR PEAK

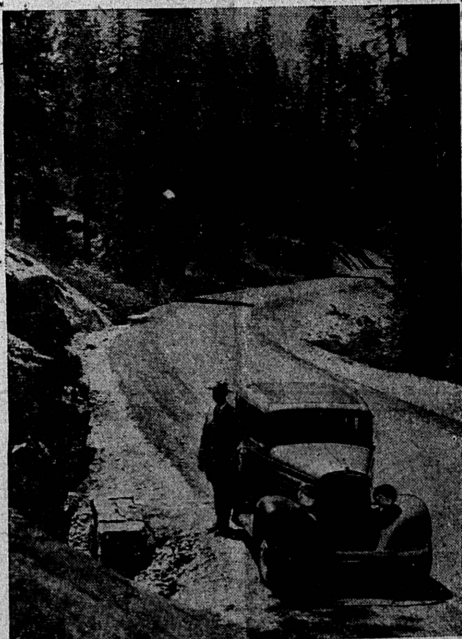

The late arrival of hot weather this year has caused an unusually large number of old refrigerators to be abandoned in favor of new electric refrigerators during the month of July as compared with July of previous years, according to H. M. Abramson, manager of the Star Furniture Company, local Frigidaire dealers. "Usually the peak months for the discarding of the older type ice boxes," said Mr. Abramson, "occur in either April or May since these are the months when most people give thought to modernizing their methods of refrigeration. This year, due in part to the unseasonable weather, action on this project, with the result that it looks now like July will closely approximate the usual peak months for changes in refrigeration methods.

"Of course most people realize that food needs proper temperatures for preservation the year round, that it is in fact summer in the kitchen all the time, but it is the coming of the warmer weather outdoors that brings the many inconveniences which change realization into action," Abramson states.

Scenic Generals Highway Opens

One of America's most scenic drives is found in the new Generals Highway, super-highway connecting Sequoia and General Grant National Parks, in the High Sierras. Built at a cost of $2,370,000, the highway extends 46 miles from the entrance of Sequoia, where the gigantic age-old Sequoia trees abound, on through General Grant National Park. The plant trees, deer and bears and other wild life, and health-taking scenic grandeur will attract thousands of tourists over the recently opened highway, which was visited last week by a party of Southern California motorists in the Chevrolet Six standard sedan seen above on the highway.
