PARIS. (U. P.) — French couturers are beginning to the first clothes for winter sports. Here is one field of feminine apparel in which it is almost impossible for great changes to take place as, after all, ski suits have to be simple, comfortable and warm.

Marjoric Dunton shows a costume consisting of woolly gray pants worn with a heavy sweater blouce of gray, green and red plaid. For extra warmth and to allow plenty of freedom for the arms, there is a sleeveless jacket of gray leather which is fitted closely so that the bulk of the heavy clothes will not make the body look shapeless. This aki suit is completed with a modified aviator's cap in gray which is worn well back on the head and has a pointed flap which protects the back of the neck.

Schlaparelli's version consists of tobacco brown pants worn with a heavy surfle neck sweater and a chamois jacket. For added warmth there is a shagey bear skin coat, foggef tip length, with a warm food of the fur which can be pulled up over the head.

The same house shows a, suit with a skirt of dark hrown seal lon worn with a hip-length brown wool jacket trimmed with sea lion collar and cuffs and fastening with gold gauntiet with a skirt of dark hrown seal lon worn with a hip-length brown wool jacket trimmed with sea lion collar and cuffs and fastening with gold gauntiet of the protects the back of the nead.
