Speed Work on Giant Aqueduct

Assuring Water For California's Metropolitan Water District Cities

Frank E. Weymouth, General Manager and Chief Engineer of Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, under whose direction huge Colorado River Aqueduct is moving steadily to completion.

Building the Metropolitan Aqueduct from the Colorado River involves many world record-breaking construction operations. (Left) A drag-line excavator is moving aside another load of earth and rock to clear the way for the 392-mile aqueduct. This batch of material measures 3 cubic yards, or one-fifteenth-millionth part of the 45 million cubic yards being excavated on the big water supply job. (Center) Looking out of the portal of one of the 38 aqueduct tunnels. This one has just been completed and the concrete floor is being water-cured. These bores are 16 feet in diameter, total 108 miles in length, one of the world's greatest tunnel driving operations.

To bring a thousand million gallons of water a day from the Colorado River to the cities and areas comprising the Metropolitan Water District, an army of 7,500 workmen is pressing forward the fifth year of construction work on the giant of all water supply systems. Work on the main aqueduct line, extending from Parker Dam to Cajalco Reservoir, the principal aqueduct storage basin, is now 75 per cent completed. On the entire 392-mile aqueduct system construction work is more than 62 per cent completed, according to Frank E. Weymouth, General Manager and Chief Engineer of the Metropolitan Water District.

Included in the 392 miles of water supply lines are 108 miles of hard-rock tunnels, of which more than 103 miles already have been excavated. Work is still in progress on the spectacular 13-mile San Jacinto Tunnel, where 4 1/2 miles of difficult tunneling operations remain to be done.

Where the aqueduct crosses comparatively smooth desert areas it frequently takes the form of concrete-lined canals. These canals total 63 miles in length, and all have been completed. Aqueduct canal sections are 55 feet wide at the top, 20 feet wide at the bottom, and 12 feet deep.

In crossing the many depressions, ravines, and small canyons encountered along its route, the aqueduct takes the form of inverted siphons. There are 148 of these structures and 136 have been completed.

Other main features of the aqueduct project include Parker Dam, five pumping plants that will lift the water 1,617 feet in crossing mountain barriers, 55 miles of covered concrete conduit, Cajalco Reservoir, several smaller reservoirs, and 160 miles of concrete and steel pipe that will deliver water from the Cajalco Reservoir to each of the cities in the District.

Still another feature of the gigantic water supply system is the 237-mile power transmission system that will deliver electric energy from Boulder Dam to the five aqueduct pumping plants.

Work on all phases of the aqueduct project is now in progress or has been completed, and the entire system is scheduled to be ready to deliver water to the Metropolitan Water District cities early in 1939.

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

The Christian Science Lesson-Sermon on Sunday, in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, denounces ancient and modern necromancy, alias mesmerism and hypnotism. These words from the book of Jeremiah are the Golden Text: "I am with thee to save thee and to deliver thee, saith the Lord. And I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee out of the hand of the terrible."

The Lesson-Sermon includes the Scriptural verses from the Psalms: "O Lord, how great are thy works! and thy thoughts are very deep. A brutish man knoweth not; neither doth a fool understand this. When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish: it is that they shall be destroyed for ever: but thou, Lord, art most high for evermore."

Among the passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, is the statement: "As named in Christian Science, animal magnetism or hypnotism is the specific term for error, or mortal mind. It is the false belief that mind is in matter, and is both evil and good; that evil is as real as good and more powerful."

Christian Science reading room at 1208 El Prado. Public welcome.

Dogs Quarantined In Beach Cities

yapping a friendly greeting for the children there.

The pup immediately became the center of a group of playful children. When the children were summoned to class the pup was smuggled into the classroom.

Before noon recess was called. Its razor-sharp teeth had pierced the skin of a score of small hands and arms as its yapping turned to snarling.

The little animal was picked up a short time after it ran from the school and placed in the Inglewood pound, where it died Friday. Examination of the dog's brain showed unmistakable evidence of rabies, a disease which brings death by madness.
