Brilliant Comedy Romance

The special brand of humor that Claudette Colbert has made her own sparkles throughout "I Met Him in Paris," brilliant comedy-romance which opens tonight at the Plaza theatre.

With two leading men, Melvyn Douglas and Robert Young, fighting to win Miss Colbert's affections, "I Met Him in Paris" offers a double guarantee of sparkling situations and bright dialogue to the legion of Colbert fans who thrilled to her earlier comedy hits, "It Happened One Night" and "The Gilded Lily."

In "I Met Him in Paris," Miss Colbert, a young American girl in Paris on her vacation, is the object of the affections of both Douglas and Young, who portray, respectively, a playwright and a novelist.

The action of the film is at whirlwind pace; the trio of stars is whirled from Paris to Switzerland and then back again to Paris. But no matter where they are, both men find the time—and the inclination—to keep right on the trail of the girl.

In the second feature George Brent and Anita Louise have their first co-starring assignment in the Cosmopolitan production, "The Go Getter," which will be shown at the Plaza theatre beginning tonight.

Their first scene—photographed only a few moments after Director Busby Berkeley introduced them—was an intimate love session which had to be shot five times before Berkeley was satisfied. Each time Brent and Miss Louise had to embrace and kiss twice.

AROUND HOLLYWOOD FILM LOTS

HOLLYWOOD. (U.P.)—Hollywood screen stars, long afraid of color, now have lost their fears and consider tinted films an aid to their careers.

The experiences of Marlene Dietrich, Janet Gaynor, Joan Bennett, Warner Baxter and other stars have proved to them that color is not a menace.

When colored films first were introduced, Miss Dietrich flatly announced:

"I will never make a color picture."
She and others were swayed against color by the jaundiced appearance of stars in early color pictures. Since that time new lighting and makeup have been introduced especially for the color pictures.

To overcome this prejudice against color, studios asked the makeup experts to devise means of making the stars appear natural. Max Factor, a veteran among makeup artists, said he experimented six years with makeup for technicolor films before he permitted the results to be tried in a picture.

The new makeup has been used in Walter Wanger's "Vogues of 1938" with the result players found they photographed even better than they did in black-and-white pictures.

"With the aid of the correct makeup," Factor declared, "the stars appear on the screen in their natural shades, which brings out the beauty of their eyes, the coloring of their hair and enhances their appearance."

TOUGH FIGHT IN NEW FILM

What is described as the toughest fistic battle ever put on a movie screen is that now on view at the Torrance theatre starting tonight, where Warner Bros. pugilistic drama, "Kid Galahad," with Edward G. Robinson, Bette Davis and Humphrey Bogart as stars, is the feature attraction.

This is an 11-round slugfest between Wayne Morris, sensational new player, and William Haade, ex-steel worker, who was taken off the skeleton of a New York skyscraper to be made into an actor.

Morris is "Kid Galahad," Robinson is his manager. Double-crossing the boy, Eddie sends him to slug with Haade, who as "Chuck McGraw," is a notoriously hard hitter. The manager hopes he'll be knocked out. After eight rounds of this, Eddie's better feelings come to the top. He changes tactics—though he'll lose a lot of bets—and makes a Gene Tunney style of fight for Morris, advising him to "get on his bicycle" and keep away from Haade. The boy does, and in the 11th round puts the K.O. on the bigger man. Morris weighs 195, Haade 210 pounds.
