Hopkins Ending 42 Years' Work As Co. Assessor

Speculation as to who will be Los Angeles county's new assessor was aroused this week, following the announcement from County Assessor Ed Hopkins that he definitely will not run for re-election next year.

The veteran county assessor, now approaching his 75th year, has been elected and re-elected to his office seven times by the citizens of Los Angeles county, and has been in the county service for a total of 42 years.

John W. Hartman, chief deputy county assessor for a number of years, and second in command in the office for some time, is expected to be a strong contender for the office, if he wants to make the race.

Has Two Distinctions
John R. Quinn, former county supervisor from the Fourth district and now chairman of the State Veterans' Welfare Board, also is expected to be a candidate, according to reports around the Hall of Records.

Several so-called tax experts also are expected to enter the race.

Hopkins has the distinction of having appointed the first woman deputy assessor in the history of American government. He also bought the first automobile for a county department. The woman deputy was Mrs. Leona Russ, appointed in 1913.

Assessed valuation of the county was only $100,000,000 when Hopkins was appointed in 1895. This year the valuation, by contrast, is $2,200,511,630; exclusively of the public utility valuations.

BAND MAKES HIT AT FAIR

Sunday's tremendous crowd that jammed the auditorium at the Los Angeles County Fair grounds in Pomona greatly enjoyed the appearance of the Torrance Municipal band and its music, according to local residents who were there to head the two-hour concert and gauge the reception given the organization.

Including members of the band, a full carload of Torrance folk entrained at the Pacific Electric station Sunday morning to take advantage of the P. E.'s excursion rate to the fair. The band appeared in its new uniforms of white, trimmed with black, and received an ovation after its concert. John T. Watson directed and the program proved to be one of the outstanding entertainment hits so far offered on the fair program.

The new uniforms include white coats and caps decorated with black striping and pocket insignias. They were recently purchased by the city at a cost of about $500.

FIDO WINS MORE FREEDOM

12 Dog Catchers Patrol County Area

The dog population of Los Angeles county was enjoying a bit more freedom this week—that is—a dog on his master's property need no longer be kept on a leash.

The modification of the ordinance was voted by the county board of supervisors after hearing a report from the county pound-master disclosing that only three rabid dogs had been found out of 1,774 animals picked up during July and August.

But the ordinance has been financially profitable for the county, however, as some $19,000 in fees was collected, as compared with $4,600 during

Modern School of Gas Cookery Opens Free 3-Day Session in Auditorium Next Wednesday

MANY GIFTS TO BE GIVEN EACH DAY

Ushered in with all the fall activities is the new Modern School of Gas Cookery sponsored by The Herald.

This new cooking school is under the able direction of Jessie B. Ewing, home economics expert and home service representative of Southern California Gas company, and will be held at the Torrance Auditorium next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 29, 30 and Oct. 1.

The sessions will begin promptly at 1:30 o'clock and "school will be out" at 3:30. Miss Ewing renews her acquaintance with hundreds of local women when she again presents her little cooking dramas starring the modern automatic gas range and gas refrigerator. A large number of valuable gifts will be distributed to the school's "students" each afternoon.

Will Cover All Phases
"It keeps me busy all summer doing research work and testing recipes for our many friends who find it inspiring and entertaining to keep up-to-date with all that is new in the culinary world," Miss Ewing says. "This year again we have new and speedier gas ranges which demand new study. In the Modern School of Gas Cookery our programs will cover low-temperature roasting of meat and fowls; deep-fat and simmer cooking; broiling and broiling; and cake baking. Cooking is indeed an art and one of the most interesting hobbies as well. Our three-day school of cooking will endeavor to cover all phases of cooking that appeal to modern families both from a variety standpoint and that of economy."

Miss Ewing is a graduate of University of California with degree in Home Economics. Her headquarters are located in the Southern California Gas company building in Redondo Beach. Her programs will feature oven dinners, yeast turkey (new low-temperature), double-quick broiled steaks, speed break-fasts, top-of-range casseroles and many other modern dishes which are individual and especially created for modern gas range cooking. In addition to the gas range recipes, there will be frozen dessert recipes for the gas refrigerator and many hints for making work in the kitchen more agreeable and wholly pleasant.

Each day's session will be different. (Continued on Page 2A)

District Firemen Defer Action On Time-off Bill

At their meeting in the central fire station last Thursday night, members of the Harbor District Firemen's association decided to defer action on the new time-off legislation until the California State Firemen's association convention is held in Redding next week.

By the terms of Assembly Bill 2,505, adopted at the recent legislative session, firemen are supposed to have one shift per week or four shifts per month off-duty when they are not subject to call. They now work one 24-hour shift on and one shift off but are subject to emergency calls at any time in most communities.

Nearly 100 Come Here
Few municipalities are abiding by the new law, it was said at the meeting here, and the state convention is expected to provide funds to start a test case of the law, firemen were told by Capt. Clement of the Long Beach fire department.

Nearly 100 firemen from departments in Harbor district cities were guests of the local fire department at the session. Torrance expects to send a representative to the Redding state convention. Refreshments were served to the firemen and several city officials who attended last week's gathering here.

Mothers Center Will Continue

Continuance of the Mothers' Educational Center, conducted by Dr. Maude Wilde on the fourth Friday of each month at the Torrance Woman's clubhouse, was assured this week as four civic-minded organizations agreed to sponsor the project.

For the past ten years the $15 monthly charge of Dr. Wilde and her assistants has been paid by the Chamber of Commerce. A recent ruling of the city auditor, however, prohibiting the use of tax money for this purpose, compelled the chamber to withdraw its support and for a time this worthy aid to young children and their mothers was threatened.

However, following vigorous efforts on the part of Mrs. Lillian Barrington and other Woman's club members, Chamber of Commerce officials agreed to contribute $5 per month out of membership funds. The balance of the $15 monthly charge will be made up as follows: Torrance Community Service Association, $5; Rotary $2.50; $2.50; and the remaining $2.50 per month is expected to be furnished by the Kiwanis club, according to R. J. Deininger, president, who is shortly to submit the request to club members.

The regular session of the Mothers' Educational Center will be held tomorrow (Friday) at the Woman's club, 1422 Engracia avenue, and thereafter on the fourth Friday of each month, Mrs. Barrington states.

Rider Injured When Thrown from Horse

Suffering from a possible skull fracture and severe bruising, Miss Verona Madden, 23, 1014 South Beryl street, Redondo Beach, was rushed to Jared Sidney Torrance Memorial hospital from the beach community shortly after noon yesterday. She was thrown from her horse near the end of a morning canter. Today Miss Madden is reported to be making a good recovery.

Reservoir Near Lomita Studied by MWD Staff

Field surveys for the new storage reservoir which the Metropolitan Water district plans to construct in the Palos Verdes Hills are nearing completion, it was learned this week from the district offices in Los Angeles.

The proposed reservoir would have a capacity of about 300,000 gallons, and would be sufficient for a only two or three-day supply for Torrance, Long Beach and the harbor district of Los Angeles city, in event that an earthquake should break the supply pipes on the feeder line soon to be constructed southerly from the northern edge of Eagle Rock, it was explained.

Location planned for the reservoir is on Narbonne Avenue south of Lomita. A dam would be constructed across Narbonne Avenue about one-fourth mile south of the Palos Verdes Sand company's bunkers now being erected.

The Narbonne Avenue would be re-routed a short distance south of Lomita, via Palos Verdes drive, around the reservoir.

Tire Blowout Proves Fatal

James H. Hanks, 51, well-known resident at 1304 Acacia street and electrician for the Superior Oil company, was fatally injured last Saturday afternoon when a rear tire on his small truck blew out, causing the machine to overturn near Kettleman Hills in Kern county. Mr. Hanks was found by the road in a dying condition and he never recovered consciousness.

He had left home here about noon Saturday to go to Kettleman Hills where his firm was doing some work. On his trips away from home he usually called his wife, Mrs. Zula Hanks, by telephone to let her know he arrived safely and tell her when he would return. Saturday evening she waited for his call and when word came by telephone of his death she collapsed. Mrs. Hanks is still prostrated by the tragedy.

Mrs. Hanks was a native of Murphysboro, Illinois, where he was born May 23, 1886. He had lived here since 1917 and previously to his connection with the Superior Oil company he was an electrician for the National Supply company. Besides his wife he is survived by a sister, Mrs. L. Levy of Murphysboro; a brother, Frank Hanks of Duquoin, Ill., and his brother-in-law, Urtis Geraghty of Los Angeles.

The funeral service will be held tomorrow (Friday) afternoon at 2 o'clock at Stone and Myers' chapel. Members of the Masonic lodge, of which he was a valued member, will conduct the service and Mrs. Thomas Ulrich will be soloist. Interment will be at Inglewood Park cemetery.

Welfare Fund Being Raised Without Show

Without any solicitors other than volunteer workers, without the fanfare of publicity and minus all the "show" that usually accompanies similar charitable efforts in other cities, the Torrance Community Welfare association is steadily proceeding to raise $1,500 or $2,000 deemed necessary to aid underprivileged persons and families here.

"We are not engaged in a 'drive' or 'campaign' for welfare funds in the way that other cities raise their Community Chest revenue," Sam Levy, general chairman of the fund-accumulation effort, said this week. "That is because we don't believe in 'high-pressure' the people and are well satisfied with the subscriptions volunteered by Torrance industries, business firms and private citizens."

"However, we have still a long way to go to reach our objective which is enough money to continue the welfare and relief work here that is not touched by the county, state or Federal aid," Levy pointed out. "Any subscriptions to the Community Welfare association—of any amount—will be most appreciated and these may be left with me or at the Chamber of Commerce."

The Community Welfare group has a distinguished record of expending funds for 15 years here without one cent being paid for overhead or administrative expenses of any kind. This has been possible thru the unselfish efforts of leading citizens to afford welfare and relief to their less fortunate neighbors without any thought of remuneration.
