Paris Styles

by MARY FENTRESS

PARIS (U.P.)—Hobnobbing with M. Franck Meyer, tall, plump Austrian headwaiter at the Ritz Bar, who knows as much about society and fashions as he knows about mixing cocktails, is a good way to get an intimate view of what the smart Parisian wears in the late afternoon when the first winter snow is threatening.

At the Ritz there is always a fashion show. Although the dominating color braving the winter storms is the classic black under heavy furs with dashes of bright contrast here and there, a few dare to be different and emerge in subdued tones of red, green and mauve.

Directly facing the fantastic mural by Pico sat a gray-haired woman in a soft mauve wool dress trimmed with a light short bob of gray curls, fastened at the throat with a huge multi-stoned pin. The waistline was nipped and without a trace of a belt. Her hat was simply a sky-rocketing twist of black felt, gloves, black suede with gray buttons, shoes, black suede with the latest gray caracul trim.

Near her sat a sleek brunette, wearing Mainbocher's favorite sweater blouse in dark green reaching to her hips. Ecotically shaped on her head was a matching green silk jersey excuse-for-a-hat with scarf ends crossing over at the top of her head and tying sub-chin. Her mink-dyed fur coat was finger-length, revealing three narrow pleats in her skirt.

Bunco Man, Posing as L. A. County Health Official, Preys on Merchants

Revealing that the bunco man representing himself as a county health official is still at large and operating, County Health Officer J. L. Pomeroy, M. D., has issued a warning to all merchants in the county not to pay any money to anyone so representing himself. Dr. Pomeroy also urged that, should such a person call upon them, merchants should do everything within their power to hold this man and call the nearest Sheriff's office or police station.

DR. POMEROY asks help

"This man, using a lost badge 115, 276, approaches food stores and asks for a 'bond' of $5 to $25 as a guarantee that the owner will 'clean up' the establishment, giving a receipt on plain cheaply printed forms and signs the name 'E. Dalton.'" Dr. Pomeroy stated.

"No county health official is authorized to collect such a bond and, after conferring with the Sheriff's and District Attorney's offices, I should like to impress upon merchants the importance of apprehending this criminal and ask their cooperation."

Half-Acre Home Sites in Keystone

"Torrance Heights" is the name of the new small-farm tract opened this week on six acres of elevated land on South Figueroa between Carson and East Road in the Keystone district by Mrs. Grace M. Eberly and her daughter, Mrs. L. E. Rose.

"One new, modern home with a double garage at 21317 South Figueroa is almost completed on the tract and is now open for public inspection. The tract has been subdivided into half-acre plots and is regarded as one of the choicest properties in the vicinity.

Unlike some Keystone areas, it is high and dry at all times. Mrs. Eberly and Mrs. Rose, the owners, invite local workers to inspect the tract and visit the model home. They are selling the land at exceptionally low prices which should appeal to workers in the Harbor district.

SEE HOW IT'S DONE

New wrinkles with smooth brows at The Herald's free Cooking School in the Torrance theatre Jan. 12, 13 and 14.

What cost strikes in this country for 1937, and what is the outlook for peace and industrial prosperity in 1938?

Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation, announces that the cost of strikes to the nation rose from $370,000,000 in 1936 to "somewhere near five billion dollars" for 1937. He added that the first six months of 1937, with over 2,500 strikes, "was the worst and most costly period of labor turmoil in our history."

Such figures give pause for thought. Excessive number and cost of strikes in the year just past are vital factors in the present business recession. Strikes mean waste—waste of capital as well as waste of wages and human material.

The New Year, however, should usher in an era of peace and conciliation between capital and labor. Large industrialists are inclined to feel that the two factions could "get along together" were it not for the stumbling block of Federal laws. The National Wages and Hours Bill has been referred back to committee for revision and possible burial, thus elevating the air for direct negotiations between the two protagonists, without undue governmental interference.

What then is the solution? Sheer economic necessity dictates that capital and labor get together. "Collective cooperation" is the modus operandi suggested, replacing "collective bargaining." There is no doubt that this reflects the sentiment of business as a whole, which has cried out for a labor policy free from too much bureaucratic control, substituting a philosophy of peace for one of conflict.

Direct Negotiations

Witness the recent organization of Southern Californians, Inc., in Los Angeles, consisting of the city's outstanding industrialists and businessmen, who are accustomed to make things "tick." Men who have been helpful in the building of Los Angeles, now address an invitation to the leaders of organized labor to sit down with the leaders of capital and talk things over together, "with a view to eliminating needless conflicts in the future."

C. I. O. Meet Covers Relief

Five speakers, introduced by Neil McCone, chairman of the local C. I. O. steel workers' union, addressed a gathering of about 150 men and two women at the Civic Auditorium last Wednesday afternoon for what was publicized to be a "mass meeting on your unemployment problems."

The speakers, in general terms, told the audience that those out of work should get on the relief rolls at once and make an effort to obtain unemployment insurance which became available this week.

Ken Hunter, S.W.O.C. organizer was the principal speaker and "Councilman George V. Powell appeared to welcome the gathering to the Civic Auditorium and pledge the assistance and cooperation of the city to anything that will relieve distress among the workers in any legitimate way."

Hunter's talk contained but little information on unemployment problems. He devoted most of his time toward a defense of the C.I.O., and beating the drum for "Labor's Non-Partisan League" which he said would swing into political action "next spring." The other speakers were George Roberts, president of the L. A. Industrial Union Council; John Deese, S.W.O.C. worker in the San Francisco bay area, and Charles Rogers of the United Auto Workers.

into strikes because of a mutual lack of confidence, and understanding, because of a suspicion of motives and purposes and because of a conviction on one side that the other will not deal fairly. This is not a basis on which you can build. The invitation has been offered by Los Angeles labor leaders who have agreed to give the idea a trial.

Such direct negotiations, if successful, may pave the way to a new era of peace and understanding.
