"We preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake," are the Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon on "Christ Jesus" on Sunday in all Christian Churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts. Among the Bible selections in the Lesson-Sermon are these verses from Matthew: "And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people. But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd." A correlative passage from "Selence and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states: "Jesus' works established his claim to the Messiahship. In reply to John's inquiry, 'Art thou he that should come?' Jesus returned an affirmative reply, recounting his works instead of referring to his doctrine, confident that this exhibition of the divine power to heal would fully answer the question."

Washington Expressed Spirit of Christian Democracy, Pastor Says

By FATHER JOSEPH V. FITZGERALD
Pastor, Catholic Church of the Nativity

Another Washington's Birthday has come and gone. As true Christian Americans, young and old, rich and poor, officials of our federal, state and city government, bankers, doctors, lawyers, school teachers and professors, let us read and study this part of his Farewell Address:

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness. Let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

In the light of such a statement our true Americans are those who go to some church Sunday after Sunday; not those who say "I like all churches but go to none." This country is flooded with propagandists of all types who have and are secretly and effectively poisoning the minds of many otherwise good Americans against all churches. They would have us abandon Christ and Christianity, they would influence our fathers and mothers and children to keep away from church on Sundays. They would trample under foot the teachings of Christ and the Spirit of Washington.

For Love of God, Country

The enemies of our God and country would spend hours each day telling us the evils or good of the churches but never go to any. "Love is proved by deeds not by words." "Reason and experience," says Washington, "both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

The true American, I am sure, will place his true American Christian faith in Christ and Washington rather than on our modern propagandists. He will go to some church each Sunday for the love of God and country.

During Lent beginning, next Wednesday, March 2, at 7:30 o'clock a course of lectures will be given every Wednesday and Sunday evenings at the Catholic Church, Manuel and Cota, on the "Fundamentals of Christianity and our Christian Democracy."

ST. ANDREW'S EPISCOPAL
1432 Engracia avenue. Rev. Thomas R. Marshall, vicar. Holy communion, 7:30 a. m. Church school, 9:30 a. m. Morning prayer and sermon, 11 a. m. The vicar will preach on "The Return to Religion." The basis for the sermon will be the book by that name by Henry C. Link.

Southern California's Conquest of Drought

Installing a huge steel manifold in a Metropolitan Aqueduct pumping plant. The steel sphere is 20 feet in diameter.

(Note: Between 1920 and 1930, the population of the South Coastal Basin increased 57 per cent, an increase of 1,406,000 people. At the same time, industrial development was increasing three times as fast as the population. Both factors created a drain on underground local water reserves which resulted in an overdraft of 200 million gallons of water per day. Instead of getting their water from free flowing wells, the various communities in the area are now pumping water from 100 to 600 feet. This is the fourth of a series of articles about the Colorado River Aqueduct.)

In 1923, the handwriting on the wall was clear, and once more the City of Los Angeles set about to import additional water. This time, William Mulholland—twenty years older, and using an automobile instead of a huckaback—headed east across the desert instead of north. To the east lay the Colorado River, and it was toward this river that Mulholland directed his survey because it offered the only available source of water not already fully appropriated. With its headwaters high in the Rocky Mountains in northern Colorado and the headwaters of the Green River, its principal tributary, 200 miles farther north in Wyoming, the Colorado is fed by the melting snows of the western Rocky Mountain watershed, covering a total area of 245,000 square miles. It is the third longest river in the United States, having a length of 1,650 miles. On its long journey from the Rockies to the Gulf of California it gouges out the chasms of the Grand Canyon, forms part of the boundaries of three of the western states, a part of the international boundary between Mexico and the United States, and for a long time has been a source of names based on the hopes of those who tried to fathom its mysteries. Hernandez Alarcon, a lieutenant of Mendoza, who succeeded Cortez in the plundering of Mexico, found the mouth of the river in the Gulf of California in the fall of 1540. About the same time one of Francisco Coronado's exploratory parties discovered the river near the Grand Canyon and followed it south to its mouth. Neither Alarcon nor Coronado's men, one Diaz by name, had any use for the river other than the hope that it would lead them to the Seven Cities of Cibola. Cortez, Conqueror of Mexico, had heard that somewhere "to the north" lay a region of fabulous wealth—Seven Cities, their houses built of solid gold, their streets paved with precious jewels. Mendoza, following the attempts of Cortez to find and sack the Seven Cities of Cibola, dispatched two parties, a land party headed by Coronado and a second group to go by water and led by Alarcon. Alarcon, thinking the river would lead him to wealth, chose to call it "The River of Good Guidance." Diaz, more skeptical after footsore months across the burning southwestern deserts, named it "The Firebrand River"—"Rio del Tison." Later, Spanish Padres knew it as "The River of Good Hope," and after they had found death on its banks they renamed it again as "The River of Martyrs." Two hundred years after Alarcon, Father Garcia gave it the name of "El Rio Colorado"—"The Red River," because of the reddish color of its water during the summer flood season.

Until the construction of Boulder Dam, these same summer floods threatened on many an occasion to rob the name once more to "The River of Martyrs." A river of extremes, it varied in the quantity of water it carried from a low of 2,000 cubic feet per second to 200,000 cubic feet per second in its roaring floods. In 1906 one such flood broke its banks and poured into the Imperial Valley to form the Salton Sea—a dead sea covering to this day an area of 50,000 acres of land which cannot be drained because it is 250 feet below sea level.
