FASHION PREVIEWS

THE period is important in this season's fashions. If your evening dress is an Eighteenth Century picture of the Empress Josephine, you will prove yourself a lady of today by looking like a belle of yesterday. Left, above, is a white chiffon sculptured dress as graceful as the draperies of the winged victory in contrast to the black crepe dress, a good basic sheath that can be worn with endless jackets and evening sweaters. Lounging on the greenward is another Directoire miss—white chiffon with glittering stars embossing the bodice, with a high, tipped-in waistline, a graceful full soft skirt, very slim-making and effective as pictured in the December Pictorial Review.

IN MEMORIAM DR. J. S. LANCASTER

A tribute to our dear friend and doctor. From the Pacific Electric Employees:

He has gone from us, our Doctor,
But we hope to meet again;
He was a friend to his patients
And a real brother to man.

He was a friend to the children,
Their aches and pains he did ease;
And when he was called to a patient,
He surely tried hard to please.

His life was an example;
He lived it honorable and true,
If you went to him with your troubles
He did all he really could do.

He was kind, sympathetic and loyal
To those who came for his aid,
He lived the life of a Christian
And many a friend he made.

When our call comes to join him,
The time nobody can tell,
I hope like our dear friend, the Doctor,
We will be ready to go.

Written by E. L. Horton.
