MWD Feeder Line to Serve Torrance Under Construction

Construction has now been started on the southern section of the Metropolitan Aqueduct Palos Verdes feeder, which will supply Torrance with Colorado River water.

Initial construction of this line, which will extend for 13½ miles from 98th street south to a reservoir in the Palos Verdes Hills, was started at 184th street midway between Vermont avenue and Figueroa boulevard.

Metropolitan Water District specifications for this part of the Palos Verdes feeder divide the work into two schedules, one extending between 98th and 184th streets, and the other from 184th street to the Palos Verdes reservoir. Construction work now under way is proceeding north from 184th street toward 98th and Wadsworth streets.

A Water District pipe line is now practically completed between this point and Eagle Rock Canyon in the northern part of Los Angeles, where it connects with the main feeder of the Metropolitan Aqueduct distributing system.

Welded steel pipe now being placed on the Palos Verdes feeder has an inside diameter of 50 inches and is lined with centrifugally applied cement mortar and is coated on the outside with gunite. Water District specifications require that construction of the line must be completed by October 31.

In addition to Torrance, the Palos Verdes feeder will bring metropolitan Aqueduct water to the central part of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles harbor area, and to the cities of Compton and Long Beach. The Water District recently awarded a contract for the construction of laterals which will connect the latter three cities with the Palos Verdes feeder and the building of these connecting lines will be started in the near future.

Rapid progress was reported this week on the construction of the Palos Verdes reservoir which will serve as an operating reservoir on the feeder line. Located in the hills near the intersection of Palos Verdes Drive and Narbonne avenue, this reservoir will have a capacity of 325,000,000 gallons of water, and will be completed during the year.

Master Plan for County and Cities Being Proposed

Appointment of an organizing committee of five which would in turn select some 200 planning experts to work out a master planning program for the ultimate development of Los Angeles county and its 44 cities, is expected to be made next week by the board of supervisors, following their return from Sacramento.

Members of the board unanimously approved the suggestion made Monday by Dr. Renssen Bird, president of Occidental College and member of the Los Angeles City Planning Commission. Planning should be started now while the metropolitan area is comparatively young, and carried out on a scale similar to that begun in New York more than 14 years ago, Dr. Bird told the board.

The master plan should be built up by the 200 experts, working in conjunction with the various public planning commissions scattered throughout the county, Dr. Bird said. He proposed that private funds should finance the expenses of the group, as was done in New York.

GRADING FIELD
Grading of the athletic field at Nathaniel Narbonne high school is now under way at a cost of $107, following award of the contract to B. G. Karn, of Los Angeles.
