THREE HARBORS by F. Van Wyck Mason: Here is an audacious and lusty novel of our American Revolution and the way it was really done; among brave farmers, righteous New England shippers, wild-eyed backwoodsmen vexed and harassed until they insisted on fighting for their liberties. The author has brought us a masterful picture of those who made their living on the sea coasts of the 13 colonies in 1774-75. A long-remembered story of the Ashton brothers trying to recoup their family shipping fortunes, of three harbors—Boston, Norfolk and Bermuda—scenes of desperate bids for fortune, stirring loves and struggles to survive the hatred between Patriot and Tory.

WISDOM'S GATE by Margaret Ayer Barnes: From the background so successfully drawn in "Years of Grace," Mrs. Barnes carries on the story of the Carver family in the life of Cleely Carver Lancaster. When the Lancasters return from a diplomatic mission to China, the reader has an immediate foreboding that Cleely has a more difficult and intimate problem to face than that of "the depression," and future livelihood. "Wisdom's Gate" is a primarily good story because of its plot and because the author is able to dramatize the consciousness of an intelligent young woman face to face with an absorbing problem.

TO REMEMBER AT MID-NIGHT by Michael Foster: The life of an actress is not easy; on the heights all publicity and roses, in the valleys, dingy theatres in dying towns. Ann Parinet knew both and in telling her story, Foster has created an unusually compelling novel of stage life. None of the characters is wholly likable but this is the stage and its people at first hand.

WEDDING RINGS HOLD CHARM ... Particularly for Phyllis Sears, left, and Vivian Wertulla as they are shown a new line of diamonds by Baker Smith, Sartori avenue jeweler. Both maids disclaim immediate need for engagement or wedding rings but they were thrilled all over as they tried on the new models on display.

Anticipating the Marry Month of June, Baker Smith this week displayed an exclusive new line of famous Keepsake wedding ensembles at 1321 Sartori avenue. Smart new styles, pure white diamonds and distinctive mountings make the Keepsake line of wedding and engagement rings one of the most beautiful on the market.

In addition, Baker Smith features individual styles which can be selected separately ... the mounting designed and executed to one's taste, thereby eliminating the sameness found in other jewelry stores.

"Four years of operation has convinced me if the capital equipment of the department of rehabilitation could be operated by county relief clients to practical capacity at all times that it would pay its own way," Duffy stated. "No plant can run on half capacity, because production costs are necessarily greater."

Duffy said that during the winter months when the department should be the busiest, its power sewing equipment was idle 52 percent of the time, its wood working machines 70 percent of the time, and its shoe repair section likewise.

Claim "Special Privilege" "We can manufacture or repair any wooden furniture, do any kind of shoe repair work, manufacture trusses, re-upholster and recondition any kind of furniture and manufacture any type of clothing required for county use," Duffy added. His department has until recently made thousands of denim uniforms for jail inmates at lower cost than they could be bought in the open market.

"It is undeniably true that when the rehabilitation department, using relief clients, can produce articles for county use, that much business is lost by certain private concerns," Duffy said.

GOOD SEA CATCHES Live bait boat catches at Hermosa Beach this week numbered barracuda as well as plenty of bass and halibut.

Rehabilitation Department Said Choked

Time has come for a "show-down" as to what the board of supervisors wants to do with the county rehabilitation department, Manager E. L. Duffy told them this week in a letter outlining how it was being "choked off," with the result that it was performing few services for other county departments.

"Four years of operation has convinced me if the capital equipment of the department of rehabilitation could be operated by county relief clients to practical capacity at all times that it would pay its own way," Duffy stated. "No plant can run on half capacity, because production costs are necessarily greater."
