BROOKSOPEN UP THAT GOLDEN GATE

Plumb tickled pink this week is Harry "Friendly Credit" Abramson and his good friend Sabina as they read & reread a letter telling them that their National Home Appliance Co. did so darn well the past few months on the sale of ElectroLux refrigerators, that the Gas Co. just had to show its appreciation by sending them both to the S. F. World's Fair, all expenses paid plus $60 pocket money.

Such is life when you sell ElectroLux! (Maybe Shop Talk should check a few boxes on the side!)

FABULOUS FABLE

Postmaster Earl Conner was standing outside the Beverly-Wilshire Hotel the other night when a hobo approached him and said "Brother could you spare a dime? I ain't had a bite all day." "So," Earl says, "I bit him!"

SIX MONTHS FOR D & D

Just six short months ago Frank & Ralph Dominguez opened a small market out on Carson Ave. About all they started with were friendly smiles and a lot of hope. But this week they celebrate the first six months with plenty of satisfaction and the knowledge that they've done a fine job. To prove it, their business had increased over ten times since the first day they opened. Appropriate to the occasion the boys are running a big ad today, will favor all customers with super specials in all departments.

HARVEL'S HOLOCAUST

Skimming over the Arizona desert in a Santa Fe Streamliner with other Goodrich dealers on a trip to N. Y. World's Fair, Harvel Gutfreider, local service station owner, was suddenly thrown back on his seat by the impact of the train hitting something. Rushing to the rear observation platform when the train stopped to see wherein was the trouble, Harvel arrived just in time to be greeted by a veritable deluge of blood, bones & broken bodies, splattered from head to toe was Harvel Gutfreider, suit ruined, shirt spoiled and disposition a bit ruffled.

Seems that Harvel's train had whanged into a herd of cattle, had tossed several over on the other track. Just as Harvel stuck his head out a fast traveling train from the other direction picked up the dead bovines, tossed them right smack back into Harvel's lap.

One seldom expects to be met by a handful of hamburger while traveling these days . . . does one?

DAVE'S DAD

In a little house in Delta, where Dave Jacobs' dad & mother live stands a clock which Dave's parents bought when they were married over fifty years ago. It is one of those tall, wooden-case, Victorian tickers put out by Seth Thomas. Its tick-tock can be heard in every room and its bling-bong every thirty minutes is not very easy on the ears but it's sure plenty loud.

A few years ago Dave's dad, then over 70, was stricken with double pneumonia, was not expected to live. Dave dropped his plumbing tools picked up a brother in L. A., rushed up to Utah. Arriving, they found the old man delirious, babbling incoherently. He seemed to want to tell the family something but couldn't get it over. After a few hours of this, Dave's brother, a mechanic, realized that the old man was attempting to tell him something about a car motor. . . that if it was not properly tuned it would not function. It presently came to the brother that the old man wanted the old clock started. (It had been stopped for fear of annoying the sick man.)

With that hunch the brother wound up the old ticker, started the pendulum swinging, listened to its comforting tick-tock, tick-tock.

Well, you can believe this or not (says Dave) but no sooner had the clock been started than the old man, still out of his head, sighed deeply, laid back quietly on the pillow and went off into

ANTS SCORN
POISON WHEN FOODS NEAR

Are ants "walking away" with your house?

Those indefatigable insects are very troublesome at this season of the year especially the Argentine ant and many people are complaining that poison ant syrups are not proving effective. According to C. V. Castle, acting farm advisor in this county, it is true that when ants have a wide choice of food they may refuse to eat very much ant syrup and yet while this does not prove that ant syrups are not effective when used at the proper time. He says:

Weak Arsenicals Effective
"Practically all the ant syrups and other poisons will kill ants if they can be induced to eat the poison baits. But as long as the poison baits are plentiful and the ants have plenty of honeydew on which to feed, they may refuse to eat the poison ant syrups you put out. Perhaps the most effective time to put out poisons for ants is early or late in the year when food is scarce.

"We may also say that the control of ants must always be combined with the control of sucking insects. The insects are hard to control without killing the ants, and the ants are hard to kill unless you kill the sucking insects. Usually there is a period when the sucking insects are not numerous and then is the best time to put out the poison ant baits.

"Weak arsenicals are effective because the worker ants will take the poison down to the nests and feed it to the queens, thus preventing reproduction. Strong arsenicals will kill the worker ants eating the material, but will probably not be carried down to the nest.

Can Gas Colonies
"For stinging red ants and similar kinds which have distinct nests, you may be able to use calcium cyanide effectively. This poison has to be used cautiously to avoid accidents to people and animals.

"A small amount of the material placed in the entrance to a colony of ants and the surface covered over will result in the formation of a poisonous gas that should gas the whole colony.

"Argentine ants are not subject to control in this way, because they do not have distinct nests where this gas can be used effectively," Castle concludes.

Cows Outnumber People
FORT ATKINSON, Wis. (U.P.)—Anna Held would have been right at home in Jefferson county. Supplying milk for her famous milk baths would be no trick at all. The county has a cow for every man, woman and child living there and still some left over. County's human population is 33,785, with the cows numbering 54,994.

the first good sleep he'd had for days. In the morning he had passed the crisis, was on the road to recovery. Today he is as sound as a dollar again, skitters about Delta like a man half his age.

Dime's Beneficence Grows
Into $5 Worth of Luck

CINCINNATI, O. (U.P.)—Tommy Fibbs, a Western Union messenger, today is a firm believer in that Biblical axiom about bread being cast upon the waters. Tommy contributed his last dime to a collection at Latonia race track toward the burial of a man he never knew. Later, he found a mutual ticket in the grandstand worth $5.20.

Whale Bone Far Inland

DOUGLAS, Ariz. (U.P.)—The jawbone of a whale found in the High Sierras near Cananea is a reminder of the prehistoric day when an ocean covered the entire southern part of Arizona.
