

1,000,000 Pencils; 140,000 Erasers

Steel Industry's Paper Work Costs Millions

Nearly four million lead pencils are used up by employees of the steel industry in these United States during a year.

And they use nearly 140,000 erasers annually, too—indicating that steel workers make mistakes about as often as the rest of us.

The 2,000 gallons of ink consumed in the great volumes of yearly paperwork required in connection with making and selling steel would float several good-sized rowboats.

Pencils, erasers and ink are only minor items, however, in the steel industry's annual bill of $2,600,000 for miscellaneous office supplies, according to the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Nearly 6,500,000 pounds of office paper are purchased in a year, enough to make a pile of standard business letter-head size sheets 41 miles high.

To facilitate filing the paperwork, nearly 16,000,000 rubber bands are purchased yearly, and over 100,000,000 paper clips.

In buying paper clips the steel industry consumes steel it has previously made.

More than 110,000 inked ribbons for typewriters, adding machines and other business machines are purchased in an average year by steel companies.

Border Duty Ruling May Be Rescinded

Recent press reports that "effective immediately" all tourists returning from Mexico must remain 24 hours in that country in order to take advantage of the $100 duty exemption, are erroneous, says the All-Year Club of Southern California. The treasury department at Washington declares that the ruling will not become effective until Oct. 28, and local sources advise that "it is quite possible the ruling will be reconsidered at that time."
