CONCEIVED IN LIBERTY by CONCEIVED IN LIBERTY by Howard Fast: When the Fourth New York Regiment of the Continental Army reached Valley Forge nine men were left. This is the story of Allen Hale, one of the nine, and his friends during that hideous winter of suffering at Valley Forge. Allen is a youngster who tries to think back to the time when he had a reason for enlisting and can't quite remember past the pain, confusion and grim nightmare. It is an honest attempt to tell a great story from the opposite of the conventional point of view. Interesting portraits of Hamilton, Von Steuber and Washington will challenge readers' at n, von steuber and Washing-n will challenge readers' at-ntion, and at the end those who rvived prove that something far yound their comprehension has een shaped and "Conceived in herty"

He has covered a continent five times as large as Europe and three times as populous with many insurmountable language barriers. Packed with information, highly readable it is above all things fair. The reader is at once aware after the few pages that he not only is seeing through the eyes of an openminded and tolerant observer but one who weighs, checks and countercheeks all information on controversial subjects.

THE MIDAS TOUCH by Margaret Kennedy: Evan Jones, a young man of 27, has the "Midas touch" inherited from his father, of Corris Morgan, a wealthy financier. Although he can make money and could be very wealthy, he does not care about it, only staying in one place a short time. Neither Evan Jones nor Corris Morgan know their relationship, although they are attracted to each other when they finally meet. Other interesting, and vivid characters also appears Bessie Carter Blake, a sham clairvoyant who makes one true prophecy; Corris Morgan's sister-in-law, wanting to get away from her node of living, and various sons and daughters.
