

Tax on Livestock Still In Force

Livestock and poultrymen in Southern California are advised that exemption of livestock and poultry sales from the sales and use taxes has not yet become effective and that such sales, under the law, are still taxable.

The legislature passed a bill exempting livestock and poultry sales of a kind the products of which ordinarily constitute food for human consumption, from payment of the sales and use taxes. The measure was signed by the governor Feb. 15.

However, exemption does not become effective until a full 90 days after adjournment of the legislature have elapsed. The legislature is now in recess, to reconvene on May 13. Effective date of the exemption is therefore held in abeyance pending the adjournment date of the legislature.

Where to Go On Weekend:

Explorers and Indians, desert rats, immigrants and soldiers will move across the scene with irrigation engineers when the pageant of the rich Imperial Valley is unfolded the night of March 29 in Calexico's desert cavalcade.

This three-day community undertaking, scheduled March 28-30, will relate the colorful story of the discovery of the Imperial and Mexicali valleys, and their turbulent history from the days of Capt. Juan Bautista de Anza, Mexican officer in the armies of the King of Spain, in 1774, until the coming of the great flood in the early years of this century. The cavalcade is a civic project, non-profit in conception, and as such has enlisted the aid of nearly every Calexicoan, plus the tribes on the Yuma Indian Reservation and residents of the neighboring city of Mexicali, second half of the border twins, who are taking a large part in the carnival.

A safety record of five years operation without a lost-time accident has been established by employees of the Long Beach Steam-Electric Station of the Southern California Edison Company.

Let's Talk It Over . . . Early Specializing

By Arthur Dean, Sc. D.

Let me lay down a law to which there will be objections: It is absolutely necessary that a child who has real artistic ability in music or art start early in acquiring necessary skill.

Quite frankly I deplore early specialization. Leading lawyers will say to young men who are thinking of studying law: "Get a background, a broad cultural background, a knowledge of sociology, economics, philosophy, psychology, literature and history before you specialize in your legal training."

Doctors who know what they are talking about will tell medical students: "It is a mistake to neglect the cultural side of education. It is a mistake to take short-cuts in acquiring a medical degree. It is well to have a thorough grounding in science and general reading before starting medical training. In addition, it is fine for the doctor as an individual to have the cultural background which enhances his personality, and makes him more useful to the community and to himself."

A Typical Letter

My readers can see that I am against early specialization. And yet, in the cases of music and art, it seems to me it is absolutely necessary that a young person who has real artistic ability get right down to business early in life. But here's a letter:

"Dear Arthur Dean:

"I want to be a commercial artist, and a commercial illustrator advised me to leave high school and attend an art school. He feels that mingling with people concerned in the art field, together with a special art training, will get me further than to hang around high school any longer.

"My older sister tells me to complete the high school because

Rolling Hills Hunt Club to Ride Sunday

Clad in the traditional scarlet coats, the Rolling Hills Hunt club will ride in a "drag" hunt on the Santa Anita race track in field Easter Sunday afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock.

Leading more than 20 invited riders as master of the fox hounds will be James Albert Gough. James Burton will ride as huntsman and the whips will be Capt. Nino Lubrano Pipitone, former Italian cavalry officer and an international horseman, and Roy Tisdale, British consular officer.

Among the riders will be Mrs. Victor McLaglen, Miss Sheila McLaglen, Mrs. Phyllis French French and Leigh French.

The hunt will be staged by the Rolling Hills club as a feature of the fourth annual Santa Anita Kennel club's Charity Dog Show, sponsored by the Junior League of Pasadena.

Units of the reserve officers training corps are maintained in 275 schools and enrollment in the corps is about 154,000.

TRAIN YOUNG

Children showing real ability in music and art cannot start too early in gaining skill, Dr. Dean declares in this article. To prove his point he suggests a study of the lives of great artists — all of them started training very young in life.

not until then will I be mature enough to mingle with the older and more experienced people I will meet at the art school.

"Help me I begrudge the hours that my high school work takes from my drawing and art study. I want to get down to brass tacks.

"H. S. Soph."

Dear Young Person:

If you have real artistic ability you ought to specialize right off. Music and art are not like law, medicine, teaching, engineering. Success in the latter group rest upon knowledge of subject matter. An engineer could not possibly be an engineer unless he knew mathematics, science, some economics, and had some knowledge of business problems. A doctor must have a background of science, psychology, psychiatry and a cultured personality. A lawyer ought to know a lot besides law. And a teacher has to know about everything.

But a musician or an artist must have technique. They have to have a skill. Not knowledge, but skill. Of course I am not saying that musicians and artists do not have to know anything to succeed. But they can get along without the binomial theorem very easily — an engineer could not. They need not know how to make sulphuric acid or how to conjugate a French verb. What they have to do is to draw, or sing, or play.

Great Artists are Example

If you will notice — those of you who object to my argument for early specialization in music or art — the training which prominent artists and musicians have had, you will better understand my viewpoint.

This American idea of an all-around education before one specializes may be the reason why we have Russian, Polish, German, Italian, and French composers, opera stars, pianists, and violinists.
