AIRPLANES NOW SPEED FASTER THAN BULLETS

"An Army airplane has, in a late test, attained a speed of 520 miles an hour-faster than a builet," relates William F. Mc-Dermott in the current Rotarian magazine. "An airplane speed of 600 to 700 miles an hour is in sight."

It is the octane content of the gazoline that makes such speeds possible, McDermott points out, and it is a former Russian exile, how becoming a naturalized American citizen, who has made the discoveries that permit this hope. "The name of 73-year-old Vladimir N. Ipatieff was for years revered in Ruseia much like Thomas A. Edison's was in America," he writes.
