Record Rainfall In Dramatic Film
The heaviest downpour on record in Hollywood's movie history fell during the filming of "The Rains Came," Louis Bromfield's sensationaly successful novel, which starts Sunday at the Plaza theatre in Hawthorne with Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power and George Brent sharing stellar honors.
It was estimated that 10,000 gallons of water fell each shooting minute, approximately 40 inches of rainfall each day—more than most parts of the United States have in a year.
And rain was not the only catastrophe the stars had to face; for the picture also faithfully reproduces the flood, the dam break that adds to its havoc and wrecks the mythical city of Ranchipur, the earthquake and the fire, which highlight Bromfield's story.

Carnival Offers Good, Clean Fun
Ben and Dolly Martin have been in the show business for years and have taken their carnival all over Los Angeles county and played for the service men in San Diego.
This week they are located at Narbonne ave. and Pacific Coast Highway with a show that is equipped for dimouts.
"People need fun in wartime, too," says Mrs. Martin, "and our show is clean fun, for old and young." You can ride on the ferris wheel or in a plane, there's the merry-go-round and plenty of other thrills.

Due to the prevalence of colds and other illnesses, many absences from the ranks of the Torrance Townsend Club No. 1 have been noted. Mrs. Lura Davis is said to have suffered a bad fall which injuries will keep her confined for a time.
Tomorrow evening we shall have a party at which several games will be played. All friends and newcomers will be welcomed.

The fire department garage will have its roof and the roof of the fire tower repaired at a cost of $100—but the council was told the garage roof was in such poor condition since the Nov. 14, 1941 earthquake that it would not be impervious to the winter rains even when repaired.
