

'Texans' Entertaining This Weekend at Wilmington Hall

Harbor District residents dance every Friday and Saturday night at the County Barn Dance at Wilmington Hall in Wilmington. Music is furnished by another of America's biggest western dance bands, "The Texans." This band includes Hester, the

Priorities Held Main Hurdle In Housing Program

Members of the House committee investigating the expenditure of Federal funds in the Los Angeles metropolitan area in providing housing under the Lanham Act, toured the Harbor Hills and Normont Terrace housing projects in the Long Beach-Harbor City area yesterday and last night conducted a hearing at the Biltmore hotel.

"One of the big problems confronting the war housing program in the Los Angeles area is priorities and our hearing has disclosed that if that bottleneck can be broken, private capital can take care of a large part of the housing needs here," declared Rep. Pehr G. Holmes of Massachusetts, chairman of the committee.

"There appears to have been some friction between the municipal and federal housing agencies here," Rep. Holmes said. "We believe that this should be eliminated and that the two agencies should fully cooperate, as their work is really separate and distinct."

into Los Angeles for the all-important priorities—and then decide who was the real purchaser of the title-less land afterward?

Roberts' rules of parliamentary procedure were tossed overboard in the scramble for lots—title or no title—and priorities. Councilman Vern Babcock's motion that the bids be considered options so the buyers could seek priorities was seconded by Councilman James Hitchcock.

No vote was taken because the discussion at that point was resumed. Later, with this motion still pending, Councilman Nick Cucci proposed that "due to the complexity of the question"—which was a masterpiece of understatement—"no action be taken tonight and the two week period still hold good. Then all the lots will be up for sale." His proposal was seconded and adopted.

rozing at the same time. It seems like every time I would try to stand up the bombs would knock me down.

"My hair was all burned off and my face, hands and arms were burned. As I cleaned the grease out of my gun I said a prayer to the Lord which gave me courage. In no time at all I had the gun cleaned and put in my ammunition belt but all this time the bombing and torpedoing never ceased.

Sensations Under Fire
"I felt much better though when my gun began to bark. The first plane I helped bring down was a torpedo bomber which blew up in midair. Then came a dive bomber right for us at a high rate of speed and released what was said to be a 1800-pound bomb.

"It looked like it was heading right for me. I don't know what was wrong but I couldn't move. I could just barely raise the gun and fire at it. Just then the bomb fell along side the ship.

"All I can remember was a tremendous boom which seemed to me would never stop and a flame of fire. I don't know to this day how I ever left the gun but I was told I was relieved by one of the regular gun crew.

YOUR WARTIME Gas Kitchen Counselor

The new war ration of CHEESE

There are those of us who take cheese eating to heart—and those who could let even an all-out cheese rationing pass gaily by. True, good cooking cheese—like American (Cheddar) is rationed down to pretty small bits, but even the cheese fancier can struggle along with the non-rationed cream cheeses, Brie, Blue, Neufchatel, Liederkranz and the others.

If you have leaned heavily on this aristocrat of foods—you will now need to adjust your menus considerably, both from the "taste" standpoint and nutrition. Because cheese is particularly high in proteins and comes close to milk as the almost perfect food.

You can stretch your ration allowance in numerous ingenious ways: by grating it to make cheese dumplings, pastry toppings for vegetable pies or casserole dishes, or as the added touch to white sauce for vegetables. Again, instead of macaroni-and-cheese, use your cookbook for good substitute main-dishes high in proteins.
