Tokyo Raider Now Prisoner of Nazi Air Cadets May Start Training In Civil Patrol

THOSE WERE HAPPIER DAYS . . . Capt. Griffith D. Williams, who was with Brig. General Doellittle on the Tokyo raid, is now a prisoner of Nazi. He is shown above being congratulated by D. S. Faulkner, vice-president of National Supply, when he addressed a rally of war workers here, July 23, 1942.

National Supply workers and many other townspeople who attended the war workers' rally in front of the plant on July 23, 1942, will remember Lieut. Griffith D. Williams—the modest, clear-eyed, young Air Corps officer who addressed the gathering. He had just returned from dropping bombs on Tokyo as a pilot with Brig. Gen. James Doellittle in his famous raid over the Jap's home base.

"We're going back to Tokyo just as soon as we can and that means just as soon as you people here at home give us the equipment. You're doing a grand job just keep it up and we'll do our part," Lieut. Williams told the crowd of war workers. He has since been promoted to the rank of captain.

How well he has done "his part" is best told by official releases by the Army Air Forces. On July 4, this year, Capt. Williams was reported missing in action over Sicily. This week word was received by Mrs. Williams through the International Red Cross that her husband was being held a prisoner of Germany. It was the first word she had heard of her husband since he was reported missing, July 4.

Meanwhile Mrs. Williams has been working long hours in a San Diego aircraft plant, turning out supplies for her brave young husband and other Army flyers. Capt. and Mrs. Williams have one small child. When Williams spoke at the National Supply in July, 1942, he already has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Military Order of China. It is not known what additional medals he has received for his valiant efforts in the European theater. But his sacrifice certainly is a challenge to production workers to do "their part" until Capt. Williams is liberated and returned to his family.

Cities to Share State Funds For Post-War Road Building

Within a few weeks Los Angeles county will make application for $500,000 of state funds to defray the cost of plans, surveys, and specifications for a seven-million-dollar post-war road and bridge building program, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Oscar Hauge, chairman of the board of supervisors' road department committee.

"This money is a part of the million and a half dollar fund voted by the last session of the state legislature for this purpose and Los Angeles county has assurance of receiving it within the next 60 days," Supervisor Hauge said.

"O. P. Cooley, county road commissioner, reports that road and bridge projects affecting every section of the county have been compiled and are ready for filing with the state highway department for approval. The half million dollars can be used to pay the cost of plans, specifications and surveys but this amount of money will be sufficient to plan work costing approximately seven million dollars to construct."

At its last session the board of supervisors voted to share the county's portion of the fund with cities of the county, allocating to cities approximately $125,000 for similar work within their boundaries. A list of city projects is anticipated within the next ten days to be included in the county's application.

Their general usefulness, place in the county highway system and their social and economic service possibilities are determining factors in the selection of the highways projects. Following their approval by the state highway department, preparation of plans will begin at once so that the county will be able to begin construction work immediately after the close of the war, Supervisor Hauge said.

Seventy-nine Get Induction Orders

Selective Service Board No. 280 has announced that induction orders have been mailed to 79 selectees who are instructed to report at the Torrance Civic Auditorium on Sept. 9.

The list did not include any "pre-Pearl Harbor" fathers who are not expected to be called until the latter part of October. Until further notice selectees accepted for service in the Army will be given 21 days' furlough. However, those accepted into the Navy receive only seven days, according to board officials.
