New Southland Residents Aid To Keep War Activities Rolling

Newcomers to Southern California (in-migrants) and residents of the southland not previously employed (mostly women) made important contributions during January toward keeping war effort activities rolling smoothly.

H. R. Harnish, Southern California manpower director, reported today that newcomers to the area accepted 25 percent of the month's job referrals. Persons not previously employed accounted for another 14 per cent, he said.

The manpower director reported that 75,229 full-time workers were referred to war jobs and essential civilian activities during January by U. S. employment service offices. He said that slightly more than half of the referrals (56 percent) involved essential workers seeking to move to other essential jobs. Only 5 percent of the referrals were accepted by persons moving from less-essential to essential employment.

The vast majority of referrals were made to the hardpressed war industries and essential civilian services in the Los Angeles area, it was pointed out in an analysis of the labor market picture presented by Thomas C. Campbell, war manpower commission director for Los Angeles and Orange Counties.

Campbell reported that 63,030 of the 75,229 referrals made during January to war plants and essential civilian activities were made in this two-county metropolitan area. The two-county total included 14,771 in-migrants, 33,472 workers seeking to move from other essential jobs, 3,030 seeking to move from less-essential jobs and 8,757 persons not previously employed. A total of 26,454 women were referred to jobs during the month in the two-county area, Campbell said.

Satisfaction was expressed by Harnish over the fact that total Southern California placements in January (25,624) showed an 8.5 percent increase over December's total and he pointed out that the placement of veterans showed an increase of nearly 29 percent.

There was a sharp increase in the response of women to the manpower mobilization call, referrals of women during January being 42 percent of all referrals against 37 percent in December.

Demonstrating the effect of the manpower allocation program, 91 percent of all referrals were made to essential and locally needed activities, a 3 percent increase over December's record.

"Only five business days are left in which 1943 federal income tax returns can be filed without incurring penalties." This was the warning issued today by Collector of Internal Revenue Harry C. Westover. "We have 53 offices functioning in the ten southern counties of the state where a deputy will receive returns and will give advice and instructions to taxpayers."

"All our offices will be open from 8 a.m. until midnight on Wednesday, March 15. Many of them are now open from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., others until 6 p.m. each day, including Saturday, where war workers may take advantage of the extended hours," Westover declared.

"Because we will be required to handle more than 1,500,000 returns in the next five days, it will be impossible for deputies to actually execute forms for the taxpayers. To receive help, taxpayers must have with them the following figures: The total tax, if any, shown on the 1942 taxes; the total payments made in March and June of last year against 1942 taxes; the total payments, if any, made in September and December along with estimated tax returns; the total amount of tax withheld from wages by employers during 1943, and the total income from all sources last year, before wage deductions, Westover warned.

Taxes may be paid by personal check, money order, cashier's check or traveler's check. More than 225,000 returns involving refunds have already been sent east. More than 50,000 such returns are on hand awaiting processing. Taxable returns received number slightly more than 100,000. Collections from income taxes and payments of withholding taxes during January and February total $263,331,410, Westover said.

No extension of time has been granted for filing 1943 returns and the deadline of March 15 will be enforced. The law declares that a postmark of March 15 does not constitute a timely filing if the return reaches our office later than that date. Declarations of estimated 1944 taxes must be filed by April 15.

High School P.T.A. Program March 13

Mrs. Floyd Miller will preside at the board meeting in the council room, Torrance High school, at 1 p.m., March 13.

At 2:15, for the program in the auditorium, the commercial department will present two motion pictures which will acquaint the parents with what the school is doing.

The first picture, "Business Education," will show what courses and equipment commercial education in the Los Angeles city schools offer in training pupils for office work and salesmanship.

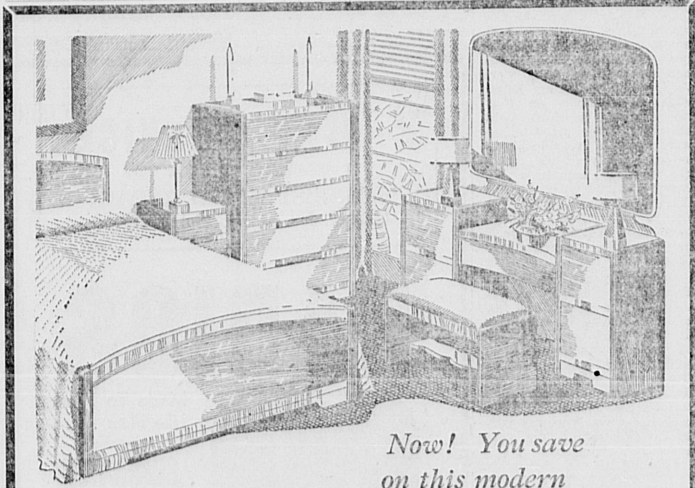

The second picture, "Finding Your Life Work," is a very good film showing a number of good ideas and principles to follow in selecting one's vocation or life work.
