Man Machines As Soldiers Man Guns-Stockdale

meet the challenge of peace after the war, just as we met the challenge of war, by a conversion which was nothing short of miraculous."

"We do not need to be afraid of what is coming after the war," he assured the workers. "Any nation which can switch from peace to war as fast as the United States of America did can switch back just as fast."

He pointed out that in the early stages of the war, before Pearl Harbor, we had only ten million square feet of factory space making parts essential to airplane manufacturing. Now we have sixty million feet of space in this use.

11,000 Planes

We marvelled when we put out 1,700 airplanes a month, and now we have 11,000 flying at once, "instruments of destruction and angels of mercy" flying over our boys on that new invasion front, he said.

And here at home, "soldiers of production" we are not going to let Jimmy down. "Just as the army will not let a gun go unmaned, we will not let a machine go unmaned," he said. "We will not miss an hour which is not absolutely necessary. We will tell our friends and our relatives that they are needed at National on the factory lines—the front lines of our soldiers of production on the home front."

Dr. Stockdale was followed to the speakers' stand by Jack S. Morgan, works manager, who declared that we need unity more and more—that we must have cooperation between each other, between management and labor, if we are to do what we need to do when it is needed. Breakdown and absenteeism is the greatest handicap, he declared, and stated that the firm is on schedule in its 100 percent output of war materials, but "just on schedule." "Lack of manpower is our biggest problem," Morgan said, pointing out that the time it takes to train a new man to handle a machine is lost time, when there was no reason for the old hand to leave his job.

The program opened with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by the entire group of employes and the speakers.

Raymond Parr Serving In Big Medical Center

PFC Raymond Parr of 1725 Greenwood ave., Torrance, is attached to one of the United States Army hospitals in England to which wounded fighters from France are routed within a few hours after they become casualties.

Hospitals for various types of treatment are located adjacent to transportation and air fields which make complete care of the patients possible without delay. They are called medical centers.

A center can handle the arrival of several hospital trains at the same time and the huge hospitals can absorb many trainloads without having to evacuate patients to other areas. But the organization of the hospital system is designed to keep patients who have recovered from battle injuries or illnesses moving along to convalescent camps or back to military duty.

Incoming wounded men, who have already received preliminary treatment from field stations and first aid soldiers, are carefully sorted out for assignment to particular hospitals. Those with chest injuries are sent to one hospital, which may also treat other types of cases but concentrates on chest wounds; burned men and men requiring plastic surgery go to another hospital; and patients requiring operations on the nerves go to still another.

Highly specialized physicians and surgeons, experts in their fields, are shifted quickly and freely from one hospital from one hospital to another for case work, diagnoses and consultations. Transfer of a physician from one hospital to another, which may be short a topnotch man, in some phase of medicine, is facilitated by the medical center which attempts to eliminate as much red tape as possible.

We have the tires proven by

3 BILLION MILES

B. F. Goodrich all-synthetic Silvertowns

IF ANYONE still has doubts about tires built with man-made rubber, here's clear-cut performance proof: by the most conservative estimate, essential drivers have already rolled over 3 billion miles on B. F. Goodrich all-synthetic Silvertowns.

Letters have come in from drivers all over the country reporting complete satisfaction. Most of them have expressed confidence that all-synthetic Silvertowns will give at least as much mileage as pre-war tires.

The 80,000-mile road test was the first proof that B. F. Goodrich could build high performance tires with synthetic rubber. The test started almost two years before Pearl Harbor when B. F. Goodrich sold tires in which more than half the rubber was synthetic. They were the first synthetic tires ever offered for sale to the American public. Building and testing them gave B. F. Goodrich the valuable backlog of experience which is now showing up in the performance of today's all-synthetic Silvertowns.

So, see us at once if you are eligible for new tires. If inspection shows that you need new tires, we will fill out and handle your application for these proven B. F. Goodrich Silvertowns.
