

Anniversary of Commander Noted At LAPE; Newspapermen Guests

The Los Angeles Port of Embarkation observed another anniversary Tuesday, Oct. 31, marking the end of Col. James R. Herbert's first year as Port Commander. He came here early in October, 1943, from Washington, where he was executive to Maj. Gen. Gross, Chief of Transportation, and on Nov. 1 assumed his present post.

As a guest of Colonel Herbert, Grover C. Whyte, editor and publisher of the Torrance Herald, participated with other newspapermen and army officers in a conference and luncheon in observance of the anniversary Tuesday noon at the port. The affair included a motor boat trip through the LAPE harbor installations.

Asked for an anniversary statement, Colonel Herbert said: "We're doing very well," but he hastened to add that in the coming year we will be called upon to do even more, as the weight of America's war effort is more and more shifted to the Pacific.

"V-Day in Europe will be another work day at LAPE," he said. "In fact, we will have more to do than ever before."

Anticipating the day when the port would be called upon to intensify its effort in the war with Japan, Colonel Herbert has directed a program of steady expansion of all facilities here.

More piers have been acquired, storage space has increased, classification yards have been installed, the Station Hospital activated, personnel has increased, office space expanded, organizational changes brought about to heighten efficiency, and improved facilities provided.

The tonnage handled by the port increased 72 percent since last October and the personnel 36 percent.

For security reasons the port volume in tons cannot be disclosed. It can be said, however, that there is hardly an action anywhere in the Pacific or Asiatic theater of operations involving U. S. troops in which LAPE does not have a part.

"Port personnel should be proud to know that we have shipped bombs which our B-29s have dropped on Japan and have furnished supplies which General MacArthur is now using in the battle for the Philippines," Colonel Herbert said.

"There is no sense in fooling ourselves," he went on. "We have a long, tough fight ahead of us before we lick the Japs. We are just now hitting our stride. Anyone who thinks it's nearly over simply doesn't know what he's saying."

"We're in the Philippines now. It will take time to clean the Japs out of there. And after we do, there still will be a lot of Japs left to fight in Asia, the Indies and Japan itself. They're fanatics and fight to the last. They're no pushover, but our men, properly trained and supplied, can beat them. They are doing it right along. Supplying them is our job."

1st Lt. Sleeth Is With 3rd Armored Division

It is now First Lieutenant Robert Sleeth, Jr., and in addition to revelation of his promotion is the news that he is with the crack Third Armored Division, under command of Maj. Gen. Maurice Rose, which has spearheaded the drive across France and into Belgium and Germany.

The Third Armored Division drove through France and Belgium, cracked the Siegfried Line and on Sept. 12 took the German border city of Roetgen to become the first U. S. division to capture a Nazi town.

The Third Armored Division is a part of the famed First Army, and its commander, Maj. Gen. Rose, who went to the Third from the Second Armored Division as a brigadier general was elevated within a month after taking command, Sept. 5, to major general because of the way the Third Armored Division distinguished itself in battle.
