Civil Employees Of Navy Invent Many Devices

In an announcement that complimented American labor on "using their heads while working with their hands," the Navy's Board of Awards to Civil Employees stated that recently suggested labor-saving devices will save the Navy approximately $1,300,000 during the first year of use.

Announcing payments up to $1,500, Rear Adm. F. G. Crisp, USN, Director of Shore Establishments and Civilian Personnel, chairman of the board, said:

"These men have made very valuable contributions to the war effort. It is just further proof of the innate intelligence and alertness of American workers. They use their heads while working with their hands."

The awards announced are in addition to others made by local beneficial suggestion boards, and were among those submitted to Washington among hundreds for higher payment. At local boards each year numerous suggestions merit awards up to $250.

SYMBOLIC—This living symbol of the coming Seventh War Loan drive was formed by Southern California high school students to emphasize their pledge of all-out cooperation in the campaign. Public, private and parochial schools have set self-imposed War Bond quotas in the U. S. Treasury Schools-at-War program, their goal being the purchase of thousands of mobile units for the armed forces during the drive. In the recent "Name Your Weapon" campaign, 837 Southland schools accounted for sale of $11,143,945 in Bonds, which financed 1399 mobile units.

Don't Play With Initials 'P.W.' Army Warns Kids

Youths living in the Ninth Service Command were warned today by the Army that the thoughtless prank of stenciling the prisoner of war symbol "P.W." on their clothing might result in serious injury.

Major General William E. Shedd, commanding general of the command, at Fort Douglas, Utah, urged all persons to refrain from use of such markings on costumes or other clothing as a jest.

He pointed out that the practice is extremely dangerous as military personnel sighting the identifying letters may believe the individual to be an escaped prisoner of war and act accordingly.

In addition to the personal danger to the hapless military personnel in the apprehension of escaped prisoners. False rumors and reports by those unaware of the hoax complicate investigations.

All enemy prisoners are easily identified by prominent "PW" symbols on their clothing.

Advertising of Used Cars Now Being Regulated

OPA took another crack at the "black market on wheels" today when new rules governing the advertising of used cars for sale were announced.

James Taylor, OPA's automobile price specialist here, said the new regulation, effective next Wednesday, requires all persons advertising used passenger cars for sale in newspapers or other publications, to include in their ads, the car's make, the model year, the model body type, the seller's offering price and the statement that the price is "within OPA ceiling."

Taylor said the new requirement is designed to aid in the enforcement of price control on used automobiles.

Car owners desiring to use for sale ads may obtain legal price ceiling information by phoning war price and ration-

Dry Period in Area After 1950 Is Predicted

Studies of rainfall and water supply in Southern California have developed the fact that alternating wet and dry periods occur in this area, and that length and intensity of the wet periods indicate that the present wet period will end some time around 1950, following by a dry period.

This was revealed by Donald M. Baker, consulting hydraulic engineer of the California Water Service Co., which provides water for the Clifton Riviera section of Torrance, Redondo Beach and other communities, at a recent meeting of the ways and means committee of the West Basin Ground-Water Conservation Group.

Baker first discussed the geology of the area involved with particular attention to sources of replenishment of the ground-water supply. Withdrawals from the basin which includes Torrance are at a rate of 80,000 acre feet annually with replenishments at a rate of only 32,000 acre feet a year.

Industry, now located here and prospective future industry to be located in the basin will continue in its demands for large supply of water, Baker mentioned some possible sources of augmenting the ground-water supply.

He stated that aesthetic, physical, legal, and financial problems as well as permanency of any supply should be carefully analyzed and that some if not all of these latter factors attach themselves to each of the sources which he mentioned.

Baker further stated, as indicative of complexity of the problem, that a recent canvass of the West Basin indicates the existence of some 2300 wells and approximately 1100 owners therein.

ing boards, or by consulting the table of used car ceilings available at OPA offices or used car sales establishments, the OPA official stated.
