

P.T.A. Leader Stresses Education As Peace Basis

"It is time we spent a little money to live rather than a lot of money to die," declared Mrs. Rollin Brown in her message to the state board of managers of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers. Mrs. Brown spoke of education as a sound basis of peace, and advocated the formation of an international bureau of education. Among its duties would be a furtherance of the exchange of teachers and students between all countries, the cultural and educational rehabilitation of liberated countries, replacements of ruined libraries and laboratory equipment and the return of art objects and historical archives. Perhaps its most important function would be to develop within all peoples a spirit of cooperation and understanding which would annihilate all strife.

The following resolution was passed by the state board of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers in session. Copies were sent to the Secretary of State, the Senate, and the House of Representatives.

the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

"Whereas, it is recognized that education is the most potent force in shaping the will of people for peace or war;

"That the education of youth in the Axis countries largely determined their readiness to wage war;

"That understanding and sympathy between peoples of various races and cultures will depend upon the education they receive;

"That permanent peace in the world will result only if all nations educate for peace, and that education for these desired ends cannot be left to chance but must be a matter of organization;

"Therefore, the California Congress of Parents and Teachers endorses the proposal for the establishment of an international office of education and of a United Nations educational and cultural organization to offer help and advice to nations desiring to develop modern educational systems."

Friends should not be chosen to flatter. The quality we should prize is that rectitude which will shrink from no truth.
