

350 HARBOR DISTRICT GIRL SCOUTS PARTICIPATE IN DAY CAMP AT TORRANCE PARK

With 350 Girl Scouts, Senior Girl Scouts, Brownies and Scout Mariners registered the Harbor District Girl Scout Tolo-ga-wa Day Camp is in full swing at Torrance Park, Tuesdays and Thursdays of each week through August 2.

The camp is made up of 10 units, each one having its own section in the park where they are identified by their flags and Indian names, as well as charts with each girl's duties registered for the day.

Mrs. Frank Church, Girl Scout commissioner for the Harbor District, and Mrs. Sally Kirsch, both of Lomita, are directors for Tolo-ga-wa Day Camp.

A trading post has been set up in the band shell with the famous totem pole of Lomita Troop No. 74, that has been exhibited from time to time, particularly at Los Angeles Girl Scout Headquarters, standing as a sentinel.

Here, handicraft materials may be purchased, including pottery making, wood carving, leather purses, lanyards, spatter prints, tin cups, stoves and ovens and clay work.

When your reporter visited Tolo-ga-wa Camp, each unit was having lunch. An attractive centerpiece was placed on the table of each unit, a requirement of the camp, and "hot dogs" were being roasted, sandwiches and large pieces of watermelon and even home-made ice cream were served.

Each unit has its scout leader and an assistant in charge at all times.

The first aid station is in charge of Mrs. W. C. Silence of the Torrance chapter, American Red Cross.

Mrs. Church said that a group of girls had gone on that day, to St. Andrew's Church, Torrance to wash windows as a community service.

The girl had been receiving transfusions from a blood donor in Long Beach whose blood type matched that of the girl's, but the donor could not be located by the mother Tuesday, deputies said. Because blood factors in leukemia cases have to be paired exactly, donors are comparatively rare, Dr. Wilcox said.

Funeral services in charge of Stone and Myers are pending awaiting word from the family regarding possible burial in Lubbock, Texas, her birth place. The father, L. E. Damron, and maternal and paternal grand parents survive.

No. 1 Material Shortage of War

"Paper is still a No. 1 war material shortage." This is a statement by Dr. Frederic H. Blair, executive secretary of Goodwill Industries of Southern California. "Goodwill is seriously in need of all types of waste paper to fill the orders from various war plants which use shredded paper for packing essential supplies that must go to our men on the fighting fronts. Not only do we need paper to supply the various demands, but we must also have more clothing of all types to meet the needs of men, women and children in Southern California who find purchasing such articles in Goodwill Stores relieves the strain on their budget. Call Capitol 513 for your nearest Goodwill store and ask the truck to pick up such clothing and paper—and anything else you have for Goodwill Industries."

Army Giving More Vehicles To State Guard

Approval has been received from the War Department for the delivery of additional Army vehicles to the California State Guard as recommended by the Ninth Service Command. Twenty-seven jeeps, 50 armored scout cars, 15 ambulances, 80 cargo 2½-ton trucks and 25 motorcycles are included in the assignment.

The vehicles will be allotted to the Northern and Southern California area commanders for distribution to the State Guard units throughout the state.

Two-way "walkie-talkie" radios have also been issued by the War Department and will be assigned to the communications detachments that are now being schooled under the direction of Capt. Harold W. Hart, man, communications officer of the adjutant general's department.

Brigadier General Hansen, the adjutant general, recently issued urgent orders to all commanders to bring units up to full authorized strength to meet current problems of internal security.

Marines Call For More Recruits 17 Years-of-Age

The Marine Corps has not received the usual 20 percent from ranks of 18-year-old draftees, according to Major Sidney J. Altman, Marine hero of Guam and Bougainville, here to recruit leathernecks from this area.

The current drive, one of the largest in the nation, is aimed at 17-year-olds who can enlist in the Marine Corps. Naval personnel percentages have drained the supply of draftees, he said.

"We want all the 17-year-old boys that we can get—because the war with Japan certainly will not be over in two or three months as some people are inclined to believe," Altman declared.

The drive also aims at women between the ages of 20 and 36 years who can qualify for the Marine Corps. They are wanted for such posts as aviation, motor transport and clerical jobs.

Major Altman recently took charge of recruiting and inducting for this area, succeeding Colonel Frank P. Snow, who has been transferred to San Diego.

USMS Needs Men from Ages 17 to 50 Years

The United States Maritime Service, through its schools and upgrading programs, has graduated and made available to the American merchant marine over 125,000 unlicensed merchant seamen and over 50,000 officers and specialists.

These seamen and officers, all volunteers, have taken part in every Allied invasion, and have "delivered the goods" to our armed forces in every part of the world in spite of storm and enemy attack.

Now that the war has shifted to the Pacific, more trained merchant seamen are needed than ever before, to keep the supplies flowing to MacArthur and Nimitz over distances that are three times as great as those in the Atlantic. Men must be trained, and quickly, for every ship leaving Pacific coast ports helps to bring closer that day of victory over Japan.

The United States Maritime Service needs men from 17 to 50 now! Enrolling offices are located in Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

CABLES SENT

Approximately 25,000 liberated American prisoners of war in Europe cabled word of their freedom to their families in the United States between early May and June 1 through a special Red Cross communication system which provided this service without charge.

Christmas Packages for Service Men And Women Prepared by AWVS

There will be no forgotten "G.I. Joes nor Josephines" in the far-flung outposts of our armed forces—nor aboard hospital ships when Christmas, 1945, rolls around, thanks largely to the efforts of the various units of the American Women's Voluntary Services in Southern California.

Because, through the unremitting activities of this patriotic organization—especially its "Christmas box fund" committee, headed up by Meses, Walter P. Story and John L. Cruze—lonely overseas men and women, sans family and friends, will receive Christmas gift boxes from grateful "foster folks back home."

Here's how the plan works: Many months before Christmas—gift boxes containing such items as shaving cream, tooth paste and brushes, metal mirrors, wash cloths, handkerchiefs, mending kits, assorted stationery items, peanuts, smokers supplies and playing cards, are individually wrapped in bright holiday paper and forwarded to unit chaplains for distribution.

And each gift package contains a cheery yuletide greeting from its donor—adding a "personal touch" which means so much to its lonesome recipient, according to the chaplains.

In addition to G.I.'s soldiering in the lonely outposts of the Pacific, and elsewhere, all patients aboard hospital ships on Christmas Day will be taken care of this year through the cooperation of the Los Angeles port of embarkation chaplain, David C. Colony. This noted Army "padre" has started preparations to equip the famous hospital ship "Comfort" with a complement of AWVS gift packages before it returns to duty.

The Comfort is now at Terminal Island dry-docks, undergoing extensive repairs as the result of a kamakaze suicide bombing raid which severely damaged its surgery—killing 26 patients, six nurses and a doctor.

The average cost of gift packages—whose contents vary—is about $2. All donations should be made payable to the "Christmas box fund—AWVS," and mailed to Room 529 W. P. Story building, 610 S. Broadway, Los Angeles 14; or your local unit (listed in your telephone book).

More than 700,000 women drivers were involved in traffic accidents in 1944. It is estimated that the accident rates of men and women, based on mileage, would be equal if men drivers averaged four times as many miles as women drivers.
