

Every Victory Bond Needed To Put Southern California Over The Top

"In this the final week of the Victory Loan drive, every individual's bond purchase—no matter how small—will be urgently needed to put Southern California over the top."

Thus area leaders in the last of the bond drives, which began Oct. 29 and ends Saturday, have appealed to the public to break all past records for any one week of bond buying.

"Many thousands of citizens, realizing the great importance of fulfilling our obligations to our victorious fighting men in this drive, already have given ton, area drive chairman, said that nothing could be more appropriate as a Yuletide gift at this time.

"It's our first peacetime Christmas in four years and we are enjoying it because our fighting men made it possible," he said. "We still owe them a big debt. By buying as many bonds as we can now—as gifts or otherwise—we are showing the true Christmas spirit."

Gov. Earl Warren has issued a proclamation designating this week as "Victory Week."

"Progress reports indicate our state is in serious danger of falling short of its quota and failing in the assumption of its share of our national responsibility," the proclamation declared.

"I urge all Californians to band together this week in the

Placement And Training Of Vets Urged By Commission

California industrial and business establishments are being urged by the State Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission to set up systems of job placement and training for returning veterans within their own organizations, in order to avoid waste of time in job-shifting and waste of funds in employment training.

This was reported to Governor Earl Warren today by Colonel Alexander R. Heron, State Director of Reconstruction and Reemployment, who stated that this comes as a result of recommendations adopted by the Commission following the recent sessions of the Citizens Advisory Committees.

One of the major projects of the California Veterans Commission is concerned with the subject of job placement and training of veterans in business and industry.

"Studies by this committee showed it is essential that a better program of veteran employment and training counseling be developed within industry," said Colonel Heron. "It has become apparent that there is considerable confusion with respect to the employment of World War II veterans."

"In the absence of the establishment of regular, planned programs of placement and job training, there is a great deal of shifting of jobs. It is estimated that the cost of training a new employee for a specific job is between $75 and $100.

"In order to avoid this economic waste and to eliminate as much as possible the waste of the time of the returning veteran, the Commission has recommended that each business and industrial firm set up its own program, built around well-trained personnel technicians. Through well-organized placement and training programs, returning veterans can be given advice and assistance in taking either their former jobs or new types of employment.

"Such programs can draw upon the advice of the California Veterans Commission which is prepared to assist firms in setting up and operating counseling service.

"It will be found that in almost every case the returning veteran has learned skills during war service which will be of benefit to employers in placing him where these skills may be used.

"There also is a psychological element involved in the veteran's return to civilian employment. Proper advice given by experts in personnel work can not only more quickly adjust the veteran to civilian work, but can save waste of time and money in shifting men and women from job to job until they find themselves."

Colonel Heron announced that members of the Commission staff are holding conferences with business and industrial management organizations to urge the adoption of the job placement and training plans recommended by the Commission.

Sheriff In Hunt For Would-Be Child Ravisher

Sheriff's deputies are searching for an elderly man who is alleged to have turned on the gas jets in the home of D. L. Baker, 4709 W. 178th st. last Dec. 10, and then attempted to attack Baker's 11-year-old daughter who was sleeping in her bedroom.

The child related to deputies that she awoke to find the man kneeling beside her bed. He had drawn the covers back and ordered her to disrobe. She said that he carried a knife and warned her that if she made an outcry he would kill her.

She refused to comply with his demands and he then started to remove her nightgown. Ignoring his threats the youngster screamed and held her would-be assailant's wrists, clinging to him as he dragged her across the room.

Baker stated that when he entered his daughter's room he heard someone leaving by the front door, then saw him running down the street.

The district was searched but the man had escaped. It was believed that the intruder turned on the gas in an attempt to asphyxiate the family.

That learning is most regrettable which unlearned evil.
